Prime Minister Winston Churchill's pledge to tear Italy's African empire "to tatters and shreds" moved nearer fulfilment today as the Duke of Aosta, Fascist viceroy of Ethiopia, surrendered himself and 35,000 to 38,000 troops to the British at Amba Alaji.

Premier Mussolini's high command said the duke's army, trapped on a 9,000-foot mountain stronghold 280 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, capitulated after running out of food and water.

Italian resistance in the African kingdom, it was said, is continuing only in the sectors of Jimma, in the south, and Gondar in the northwest.

In the middle east war theater, Britain's struggle was further complicated when Gen. Henri Dentz, high commissioner of French-ruled Syria and Lebanon, called on the Syrians to resist "criminal aggressions" of the British.

Ashland Family Lost On Egyptian Vessel

On their way to French Equatorial Africa to resume a missionary post, the four Ashland persons shown in the top photo are among the 100 Americans feared lost in the sinking of the Egyptian Zamzam, purportedly sunk by "an enemy raider" in the South Atlantic. They are Rev. and Mrs. Curtis G. Morrill, and their two children, John (left) 16 months old and Elaine, 4. Elaine was born in Africa. The couple had spent an 18-month furlough in Ashland. In bottom photo, Mrs. Morrill's two sisters, Mrs. V. E. Nelson, left, and Mrs. Robert Suter, both of Ashland, look at a map showing the route the Zamzam followed. The picture of the Morrill family appeared originally in The News-Journal on March 10, the day before they left Ashland for their return trip to Africa.

Family Departed For Mission Post After Spending 18 Months at Home.

Four Ashland residents, a missionary, his wife and their two children, were among the 100 Americans missing today following the sinking by "enemy action" in the South Atlantic of the Egyptian steamer Zamzan en route from New York to Alexandria, Egypt.

Rev. and Mrs. Curtis Morrill, both 33, and their two children, Elaine, 4, and John Stephen, 16 months, were on the steamer on their way from Ashland, where they spent an 18-month furlough, to Bekoro, Africa, their mission post for the Brethren church.

The family left Ashland on Tuesday, March 11, and sailed from Jersey City, N. J., nine days later. They were scheduled to visit Brazil and the Cape Town, South Africa, on the way back to their African post.

The last word heard of the family was on a postcard sent from Pernambuco, Brazil, on April 8. The ship left there on April 10 for Cape Town. Nothing has been heard of the ship since then, except for yesterday's announcement from British authorities that it had been lost somewhere between Pernambuco and Cape Town.

The Morrills were stationed at Bekoro, 700 miles inland in Ubangui-Shari, part of Africa held by the Free French forces. Mr. and Mrs. Morrill served as preacher and medical missionary for three tribes of natives with about 60,000 members in their parish. They had served for four years before their furlough in Ashland.

Rumor U.S. Readying New Move

Washington Believes FDR Set with Big Decision.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Prevailing opinion in Washington, that the United States is moving swiftly toward a full partnership in Britain's war against Germany, heightened today with indications that President Roosevelt is on the verge of a tremendous decision.

White House, state department and Capitol Hill circles are drenched with a variety of rumors as to what new major step the president can take to help embattled Britain.

A vast majority of opinion in these circles holds that whatever the step proves to be, it will lead inevitably to United States involvement in war with Germany. There are few dissenters.

This belief is strengthened by the fact that an increasing number of high administration officials and presidential advisers are declaring that the present American lease-lend aid to Britain is not sufficient to guarantee a British victory over Germany. If Britain falls, they add, the security of the United States is endangered.

Non-interventionists, challenging this new note, call such contentions "defeatism." Non-interventionists declare that the United States can preserve itself, if Volunteer British-American Ambulance Corps Drivers, Four Residents of Ashland Believed on Board Old World War Transport.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Hope that the Egyptian steamer Zamzam might still be afloat was expressed by the state department today, although it had been notified by the British admiralty that the ship was "overdue" at Capetown, South Africa, and was "presumably lost." The state department said it had learned that the Zamzam proceeded to Buenos Aires from Pernambuco, Brazil, instead of sailing direct for Capetown, and expressed the belief that this change in course, which would have delayed its expected arrival in Capetown, may have led to the report that the vessel is now missing.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—The loss of 323 lives, including those of upward of 100 Americans, was feared today with word that the Egyptian passenger liner Zamzam, had been sunk "due to enemy action" in the South Atlantic.

The old, 8,299 ton steamer carried 203 passengers and a crew of 120 when it sailed from New York March 20 for Alexandria, Egypt, by way of Recife, Brazil, and Capetown, South Africa.

Of these, 24 were young Americans, of prominent families, who had volunteered as members of the British-American ambulance corps to serve as ambulance drivers with the British forces in the Middle East, and 36 were American missionaries of the Roman Catholic and Seven Day Adventist faiths, bound for Africa. New York maritime circles understood there had been 45 other Americans aboard, though this could not be definitely ascertained because no passenger list was available.

Among the Americans reported aboard the Zamzam were four Ashland, O., residents, returning to a mission post at Bekoro, Africa. The Rev. and Mrs. Curtis Morrill, their four-year-old daughter, Elaine, and son, John Stephen, 16 months, who had spent an 18-month furlough in Ashland were reported by Rev. Russell D. Barnard of Dayton, member of the foreign mission board of the Brethren church, as being aboard the ship.

The British-American ambulance corps indicated that it had no hope for its members.

"This is a terrible blow," William V. C. Ruxton, president of the corps said.

Sketchy and fragmentary reports seemed to leave no doubt that the ship had been lost. There was no word of the fate of her passengers and crew which comprised 110 Egyptians and 10 British officers, including Captain William Gray Smith, her master.

A brief dispatch came through the censorship from London that "some members, at least" of the party of American ambulance drivers had been lost, and that the ship was sunk "by enemy action" in the South Atlantic.

The British-American ambulance corps announced that the ship had reached Recife safely, had sailed from there soon after April 10, bound for Capetown, and never had reached Capetown where it had been due April 21. The insurance underwriters, it said, had made an effort to locate the ship or survivors without avail.

"We believed we had taken every possible safeguard for the protection of these men," Ruxton said. "They were in transit to Mombassa (chief port of Kenya, British East

Letters Tell Of Life Aboard Steamer Missing In Atlantic

(Editor's Note: The United Press has obtained several diary-like letters written to a New York friend by a member of the British-American ambulance corps aboard the steamer Zamzam, believed torpedoed en route to Capetown with a loss of at least 60 American lives. The following dispatch carries excerpts from these letters, describing life aboard the vessel.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—As the Zamzam steamed through tropical seas toward its rendezvous with disaster, a perspiring passenger sat in his stuffy cabin and wrote:

"It will be early autumn when we reach South Africa."

The passenger, like all the others aboard, was thinking eagerly of what awaited him at the end of his voyage, never doubting that the sturdy little craft, once a World war transport, would survive the hazards of the war at sea.

He was Capt. William Wydenbruck-Loe, 50, one of 24 members of the British-American ambulance corps en route to Mombassa, Kenya, to serve with the Free French forces of Gen. Charles De Gaulle. A naturalized American, the Captain, formerly a count, served with the Austrian army during the World war.

At Trinidad and again at Recife, Pernambuco, Brazil, he dispatched diary-like letters to his friend, Baron Henry Hennett, in New York. The letters tell of life aboard the crowded little steamer and revealed that the Zamzam, from Trinidad on, was sailing constantly under the shadow of war.

The ambulance unit had 20 cars, a field kitchen and an X-ray trailer aboard. On March 25, five days

Nine Killed In Ohio Over Week-End; Pupils Escape in Bus-Car Crash Here.

Traffic accidents in the Mansfield area over the week-end contributed two deaths to the Ohio total of nine fatalities and injured at least eight persons, one seriously, while about 15 pupils in Mansfield schools escaped injury in a school bus accident this morning south of the city.

The two victims, both killed Saturday night north of Mansfield, were Samuel Contra, 20, Mansfield, and John Burghard, 48, Bowman street road.

James Kennedy, 18, of 279 Sheridan avenue, passenger in the car in which Contra was riding, was in a critical condition today in General hospital. He received fractures of several ribs and possible puncture of a lung, hospital attaches said.

Approximately 15 boys and girls riding in a school bus operated by John G. Houston, 59, of 39 North Franklin avenue, escaped injury about 8:20 a. m. today when the bus figured in a collision with an automobile on Possum Run road near the junction with State route 13 south of the city.

State highway patrolmen said the bus and a car operated by Carl Clayton McClellan, 21, of Mansfield, R. D. 5, apparently collided

SOLDIER KILLED

Bucyrus Volunteer Struck By Automobile Near Camp.

BUCYRUS — Burns Eggleston, 26, Bucyrus' first volunteer after the selective service act was passed and the third trainee to leave Crawford county was killed yesterday in Murfreesboro, Tenn., when struck by an automobile, according to reports received here today.

One of five brothers who are serving in the army, young Eggleston left Bucyrus last November. He was stationed at Camp Forest, near Murfreesboro.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Eggleston, he is survived by five brothers, Isaac, Fred and Paul at Camp Shelby, Miss., Joseph, at a camp in Washington, and John, of Bucyrus.

The body will be brought to Bucyrus for funeral services and burial.

Ashland Relatives Grief-Stricken By Word Of Tragedy

Grief-stricken when told of the reported sinking of the Egyptian steamer Zamzam with her daughter, son-in-law and two grandchildren aboard, Mrs. Maude Fickes, 239 East Liberty street, Ashland, continued on with her work at the Faultless Rubber company for "want of something else to do."

Her daughter, Mrs. V. E. Nelson, 1228 Cottage street, Ashland, told Frank Walters, News-Journal photographer, who supplied the family with most of the available information concerning the purported disaster, that her mother had said she "would rather not be home at a time like this."

Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Robert Suter, 306 Quarry street, another sister, were visibly saddened by the news which was given them early this morning by Rev. Charles Mayes, pastor of the West Temple street Brethren church, Ashland, but remained hopeful.

Mrs. Nelson was the first of the family to hear the news and immediately called her sister and

CLAIMS MAYOR'S ACTION ILLEGAL

Solicitor Holds Hiring of City Workman Once Discharged Violates Law.

Re-appointment by Mayor W. J. Locke of a city employe whom the mayor had once ordered discharged, was held a violation of regulations of the Public Employes retirement system in a ruling today by City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr.

Ward, made his decision upon the request of City Auditor Paul L. Kelley, who was withholding the salary of a worker in the waterworks department who had been discharged by the city under the retirement law in December and was rehired recently.

Mayor Locke, who refused to extend the appointments of nine aged city workers in December, rehired John Dir, a former worker in the sanitary sewer department, last month for work in the waterworks department.

When Dir applied to Kelley for his salary last week, the auditor questioned Ward as to the legality of Dir's re-appointment.

Ward ruled that the retirement law provides for no exception for temporary work, emergency or any condition.

Dir and eight other workers were released under the porvisions of the retirement law which provides that employs over 70 be retired on pension. The administra-

Railroad Unions Decide To Launch Nationwide Drive.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Representatives of the five big railroad operating unions, representing 350,000 workers, announced today they had decided to launch a concerted, national campaign for a 30 per cent increase in all basic rates of pay.

Following a conference which began last Friday, they announced they would demand wage increases which would amount to not less than $1.80 a day. Their demands will be served on the railroads June 10 pursuant to provisions of the national railway mediation board.

Unions represented at the conference were the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Engine Men, and Railroad Trainmen, the Switchmen's union and the Order of Railway Conductors of America.

U. S. Ambassador Confers With Jap Foreign Minister

TOKYO — (U.P.) — United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew visited Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka today at the latter's residence.

The conference appeared to be of special interest because it was held at the request of the foreign minister. The nature of their conversation was not indicated.

Matsuoka recently had conferred several times with the Axis ambassadors and also talked with Grew and British ambassador Sir Robert Craigie.

Reports that Japan wanted the United States to mediate the Japanese conflict with China had previously been described as "unthinkable."

Throngs Turn Out Over U. S. For 'I Am An American' Day

(By Associated Press)

Vast throngs turned rallies into spirited patriotic demonstrations yesterday as the nation held its first "I Am An American Day."

The meeting, intended to arouse in naturalized Americans awareness of what it means to be citizens of this nation, were held throughout the country in response to a presidential proclamation. Movie Actor Edward Arnold, president of the I Am an American Foundation, said there were observances in 3,500 cities.

At New York's Central park rally alone the police estimate of attendance was 675,000.

Secretary Ickes asserted at New York that the United States must give Great Britain "everything needed to beat the life out of our common enemy."

In Washington Vice President Wallace appealed to "our fine German citizens" to "join with our fine citizens from every other land in thanking God for America."

Thousands of Ohioans joined in demonstrations.

Gov. John W. Bricker, speaking to 1,200 persons at Dayton's second annual recognition for new voters, asserted:

4,500 Pupils To Appear In Physical Education Drills

Under lights at Stadium field Friday night more than 4,500 public school children will stage Mansfield's first city-wide physical education demonstration.

Performing simultaneously in ten rings marked out on the field the pupils will illustrate phases of physical training in groups of 300 each.

To start the demonstration, in which all ten elementary, junior high, and Senior high schools will participate, an American Legion color guard will conduct a flag-raising at 7:15 p. m.

Supt. W. L. Miller and Harold W. Arlin, president of the Mansfield board of education, will make brief talks of welcome; and the demonstrations are scheduled to get under way at 7:30.

Activities are planned as follows; grades 1-2, folk dances; grades 3-5-6, group games; and grade 4, relay race.

Pupils from all schools in each of these groups will take the field at one time.

Climaxing the performances will be a wand drill by 350 boys from Johnny Appleseed junior high, a Swedish folk dance by 400 girls from the same school, and a "patriotic blackout," drill by John African Colony), where they were to travel overland to the Lake Chad region to be billeted with the Free French forces of Gen. Charles Degaulle. The Zamzam was a neutral ship. It was carrying non-belligerent cargo."

The Zamzam sailed from Jersey City, N. J., March 20 for Alexandria by way of Brazil and the Cape of Good Hope.

It carried 203 passengers, including 36 missionaries of various denominations, including Catholics and Seventh Day Adventists, bound for destinations in Africa, and a party of American volunteers on their way to serve as ambulance drivers with the Free France forces in Africa.

The unit, consisting of 24 men, with 20 ambulances, a repair truck, a staff car and a field kitchen, was organized by the British-American ambulance corps of New York.

The young American ambulance drivers included Philip N. Faversham, 33, son of the famous actor, William Faversham, who, before he volunteered, was himself an actor, Michael Kirchwey Clark, 21, a Harvard student, whose mother, Frieda Kirchwey, is editor of The Nation, and whose father is Evans Clark, head of the Twentieth Century Fund; and James W. Crudgington, 21, a Princeton student from Cincinnati, O.

The name of Arthur Kirda, jr., 26, of South Kent, Conn., on the list of the missing, recalled a poignant moment when the ship cleared New York amid cheers of well wishers. Kirda had eloped three days before to Gordsonville, Va., with Miss Georgette De Vilaine, Westport, Conn., who, laughing through her tears, said to reporters: "I'm prepared to be a widow."

The missionaries included five members of the Oblet Fathers of Montreal who were en route to Basudoland, South Africa. There were five families of Seventh Day Adventists, en route to Palestine and Egypt, and 19 adults and seven children of the Africa-Inland Mission, who were bound for Kenya and the Belgian Congo.

Among the missionaries were the Rev. and Mrs. David Hall and their children, Barbara, 9, and John, 3, who were bound for Rhodesia, where they had served from 1932 to 1939.

Mrs. Kathaleen Levitt, of Holylake, England, and her two children, Peter, 6, and Wendyn, 2, were bound for Africa to join her husband, a Royal Air Force pilot.

Nine Seventh Day Adventist missionaries and others, including one infant, were aboard the Zamzam en route to posts in Africa, Egypt and Palestine. They were:

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson, newly assigned to Jerusalem.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Jenkins, newly assigned to Cairo, Egypt.

Miss Helen Hyatt, returning after a furlough to her teaching job in Helderberg college, Somerset, Cape Province, near Capetown.

Mrs. Violet Hankins, returning to the Union of South Africa to join her husband, a physician.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Russell and infant child, en route to a new assignment at Cairo.

'Actor's Son Among Missing Persons

NEW YORK—(AP)—Philip Faversham, 33-year-old son of the late William Faversham, actor, was among 24 American ambulance drivers aboard the Egyptian steamer Zamzam, reported sunk in the South Atlantic, the British-American ambulance corps announced today. James W. Crudgington, 21, of Cincinnati, son of Dr. Robert L. Crudgington, and a junior at Princeton, was also listed.

mother, Mrs. Fickes was at work when she received the news and remained there.

Walters told the family the details of the sinking and obtained a photo of those missing, Rev. Curtis and Mrs. Morrill, their four-year-old daughter, Elaine, and John Stephen, 16 months old. The same picture was run in The News-Journal on May 10 with a story about the family's projected return trip to Africa where they served at a Brethren church mission post.

Relatives told Walters that word had been received of the Morrills since they sailed from Jersey City on March 20. A postcard from Pernambuco, Brazil, was received by Rev. Mayes, member of the foreign mission board of the Brethren church postmarked April 8. Two days later, the Zamzam began its last voyage.

Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Suter were cheered when Walters told them that shipping authorities believed that the passengers and crew of the Zamzam may be safely aboard a German raider. The authorities said that if the ship had been sunk by a submarine that some survivors or trace of wreckage would have been found.

Neighbors and relatives told Walters of the 18-months stay made by the Morrills in Ashland. The family visited there on a furlough from its post at Bekoro, Africa.

in the middle of the road. Neither vehicle was badly damaged, officers said. Houston was enroute to Mansfield with the pupils who attend school in the city.

Death of Burghard Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile as he walked on Bowman street road near his home was Richland county's 14th fatality of the year against four at the same time in 1940.

Young Contra was crushed beneath a truck loaded with tires after the car in which he was riding with his nephew, Joseph Marfia, 17, West Townview Circle, crashed into the side of the truck at the junction of state route 13 and U. S. route 224 east of Greenwich, state highway patrolmen said. It required more than two hours to release Contra's body.

Miss Marilyn Lowe, 25, of Bucyrus suffered bruises and shock at 11:45 p. m. Sunday when the motorcycle on which she was riding was struck by a car driven by Joseph R. Keseros, 125 South Wilis avenue, at Fifth and Main streets in Mansfield. Miss Lowe was treated at General hospital for leg injuries and shock. Driver of the motorcycle was Joseph Stumbo, Crestline.

Five Warsaw, Ind., residents received minor injuries when their car skidded over a 20-foot embankment along U. S. route 30 five miles west of Crestline.

The injured were Neil Bennett, driver, his mother, Mrs. C. H. Bennett, his sister, Ellen Bennett, Dorothea Scott, and Willodean Walgamuth. They were treated at Crestline hospital for cuts and bruises. They were en route to Ashland to attend May Day activities at Ashland college.

Funeral services for the two Mansfield victims of the Saturday night accidents will be held Tuesday. Services for Contra will be at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday at St Peter's Catholic church with Msgr. R. C. Goebel officiating. Burial will be in the Catholic cemetery. The body will be at the family home, 91 West Sixth street, until time for services.

Surviving are the parents, Mr and Mrs. James Contra; two brothers, Cyrus and Ben of Mansfield; three sisters, Mrs. Peter Marfia and Mrs. Frank Brucato of Mansfield, and Mrs. Ross Morbitt, Marion.

Services for Burghard will be conducted at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Wappner funeral home. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer of the First Lutheran church will officiate. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Bertha Burghard, three sons, James, Clyde and Richard, and three daughters, Mae, Ella and Florence, all of Mansfield.

Convicted in Mayor W. R. Morris's court in Shelby of driving a car while under the influence of alcohol, Robert Crager, 263 Harker street, was fined $100 and costs today.

Crager was cited on a charge filed by D. W. Sipe 254 Sheridan avenue, Mansfield, who said Crager's car collided with his Saturday night on East Main street in Shelby.

Among the state's traffic victims were three Fremont youths whose car crashed head-on with a truck near Fremont. They were Vincent Haubert, 20, Chester Lash, 17, and John Shepley, 26. Albert Hunter, 30, was killed at Cleveland.

French blood," he said, referring to RAF attacks on Syrian airdromes.

The British declared when the attacks were opened last week that German planes flying to aid Iraq were landing at Syrian air fields en route to Iraq.

While affirming that France's chief of state, Philippe Petain, "has no aggressive intentions against England or her empire," Gen. Dentz said he had orders "to defend the sky and land" of the Levant states, and that "the army of the Levant is ready to opose force with force."

Reports from Beirut said citizens of the United States, Britain and Palestine had been advised to leave Lebanon immediately.

The British radio quoted a Rumanian broadcast as saying that German infantry was being transported through the Bosporus, Turkish-controlled link between the Black sea and the Mediterranean, presumably bound for Syria and Iraq.

Reports from Baghdad, the capital of Iraq, said that the Iraq air force "most effectively" bombed British warships in the Persian gulf at Basra and that the British garrison at Habbaniyah airdrome, 60 miles west of Baghdad, was cut off from reinforcements.

The Habbaniyah garrison has been under siege since May 2, when Iraq artillery and British troops clashed. Iraq's Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani appealed to Germany for help.

"The question of supplies for the British garrison has become acute, and Iraq military circles reckoned with early capitulation," it was declared in Baghdad.

Iraq general headquarters reported that British Major John Bagot Glubb, 44, known to Bedouin warriors as 'king of the desert" and successor of "Lawrence of Arabia" of World war fame, had been killed in action.

Other advices said Glubb was at a hospital in Amman, TransJordan, with two bullet wounds.

With France taking an increasingly active role in the war, the French announced officially that Germany has agreed to return approximately 100,000 French prisoners of war as one of the first results of French-German negotiations.

The group includes all French non-commissioned officers and soldiers now held prisoner who fought in the 1914-19 World war. Altogether, Germany holds 1,800,000 French soldiers captive.

Authorized quarters in Berlin said an official communique would probably be issued tomorrow outlining the new arrangements between Germany and France. Rumors that Paris would be "freed" of the Nazi yoke and placed in the unoccupied zone were described as unfounded.

The prospect of the release of troops and supplies tied up in the siege of Amba Alagi was heartening to the British, who admittedly need all available forces to meet Axis threats in North Africa and in the oil-rich lands of the middle east.

On the offensive in this region during the week-end the RAF reported a bag of 22 Axis aircraft, mainly German and at least 20 more were said to have been damaged in air battles over principal Axis bases in Cirenaicia, in the Suez canal area and in Iraq.

Great Britain was virtually free of air attacks during the week-end, while the Germans acknowledged damage to railway facilities and houses and the killing of many civilians by the RAF in western Germany, especially at Cologne. The British returned to Germany last night to raid Kiel.

In Istanbul, German sources asserted that Russian "volunteers" already were in Iraq and jubilantly looked forward to Russian-Axis collaboration against the British in the rich oil territory of the Middle East.

In Italy, a brief ceremony in Rome saw the Duke of Spoleto, of the royal house of Savoy, become King Aimone, of Croatia and don the crown of Zvonimir to establish that country's fifth foreign dynasty in 839 years.

At the same time, Italian and Croat leaders signed documents establishing the borders of the newly-created kingdom, establishing virtually complete domination of that nation and including a promise by the Croats not to build army, navy or air bases along the Adriatic.

In Washington, Secretary of State Hull declared in a broadcast address that the United States "will find a way" to guarantee delivery of adequate supplies to Great Britain and presented a program of peace aims for the time when "the tide of force" is turned back.

After a week-end lull, the strange case of Rudolf Hess gathered momentum. The London radio said the runaway Nazi deputy fuehrer, who parachuted onto a Scottish moorland May 10 has been "writing and talking" for a week and that Prime Minister Churchill had received "a full report on his many statements."

The radio said a clue to the reason why Hess "has lost his confidence in the possibility of a German victory" could be found in a German commentary published by his friend, Major-General Prof. Dr. Haushofer, "whose arrest has been reported and denied in Berlin."

"Haushofer was frank enough to express considerable pessimism about Germany's prospects in view of the United States intervention in the war," it was said.

In Berlin, official Nazi quarters countered with an emphatic denial that large numbers of political arrests had been made in Germany as a result of the Hess affair, or that Hess' wife had been arrested.

The British radio quoted Stockholm reports that "hundreds" of prominent Nazis had been arrested.

Springfield Honor Students

DESCRIBE LIFE ON LOST SHIP

after the Zamzam left New York Wydenbruck wrote:

"The waves came over the bow—gave a good christening to six of our cars which didn't find room in the hold and will have to continue the trip on deck."

The ship was crowded with missionaries whose conduct interested the writer.

"They spend several hours a day singing hymns, accompanied by a trombone player," he noted.

In addition to the Protestant missionaries there were "a number of French Canadian Catholic priests, a nice and quiet lot," and a few "tobacco and other business men, and wives joining their husbands somewhere in Africa."

Wydenbruck jotted down the Zamzam's "roll of honor" which he found posted in the corridor:

"As S. S. Leicestershire, war service in August, 1914, she transported the 17th Lancers from Bombay to Marsilles. In November, 1917, she conveyed 2,000 troops from Plymouth to Bombay. Between April and August, 1918, after taking 2,000 British trops to Archangel, she brought to London and Liverpool 5,900 American troops. In December, 1918, she was requisitioned to repatriate Australian troops and in two voyages carried 3,000 officers and men from Liverpool to Freemantle, Melbourne, and Sydney."

The Zamzam's captain, W. G. Smith, a Scot, told Wydenbruck-Loe that "he was skipper of a merchantman in the North sea last year, and while being convoyed by the British navy, two ships next to him were blown up by U-boats."

"He told us more about this extraordinary ship," Wydenbruck-Loe wrote. "In November last year, after returning from Japan and lying in Alexandria harbor, among many English warships and other merchantmen, she was bombed by Italian flyers. A 500-pound bomb hit on the port side of her stern, set the bridge on fire, and one fragment hit the smoke stack; which scar is patched up and plainly visible. What a brave old veteran she is."

FALLS FROM TRAIN

SEDATIVE CAUSES DEATH

DAYTON—(AP)—Sergt. C. C. Colville said an overdose of sleeping tablets caused the death of Robert Lloyd, 32, a brother of John Lloyd, Associated Press writer.

4 ASHLANDERS WERE ABOARD SUNKEN SHIP

Missionary, Wife, 2 Children Were Returning to Mission Post In Africa.

Bertha Gwinner, a graduate of Ashland college and the School of Nursing at the Samaritan hospital there. She graduated from the nursing school in 1928 and later taught nursing at Sandusky. Rev. Morrill is also a graduate of Ashland college.

Rev. Russell D. Barnard of Dayton, member of the foreign mission board of the Brethren church, confirmed the report that the Morrills were aboard the Zamzam. Another Ohio couple, Rev. and Mrs. Walter A. Ohman of Cleveland, Gospel church missionaries, also were reported aboard.

Rev. Charles Mayes, pastor of the West Temple street Brethren church, Ashland, who received the postcard from Pernambuco, informed members of Mrs. Morrill's family that she, her husband and their children were missing.

Mrs. Morrill's mother, Mrs. Maude Fickes, 239 East Liberty street, and two sisters, Mrs. V. E. Nelson, 1228 College street, and Mrs. Robert Suter, 306 Quarry street, all live in Ashland. Another sister, Mrs. Paul Remy, lives in Detroit.

At the time of sailing, the master of the Zamzam, Capt. William Gray Smith, a Briton and veteran of 37 years' service, said he was taking the long route via the Cape for safety's sake because Egypt, although not at war, was considered a non-belligerent ally of England.

Although William V. C. Ruxton, president of the British-American ambulance corps, reported that a thorough effort to locate survivors was without success, shipping circles felt that because the ship apparently disappeared without a trace, that the sinking was the work of a surface raider and not a submarine.

They expressed the theory that all the passengers and the crew were aboard a German raiding cruiser. The British report said the ship was lost "through enemy action."

According to the New York maritime register, the Zamzam left Jersey City on March 20, stopped at Baltimore on March 22 and sailed the following day for Trinidad. She arrived in Pernambuco on April 8 and left two days later for Cape Town.

In addition to the Morrills, a large number of other missionaries were making the trip. All were to disembark at Capt Town. Volunteer ambulance drivers were to leave the ship at Mobasa in Kenya colony to work with Free French forces at Lake Chad.

The Zamzam twice had been in danger from war action, reports from abroad said, once when splattered by splinters from a bomb dropped by an Italian plane in Alexandria and once when strafed by German planes in the same harbor. She also served as a troop transport during the World War.

The Morrills began their 12,000 mile trip from the Mission home on Fairbanks avenue, Ashland. Elaine, the older of their children, was born in Africa. John Stephen, 16 months, was born in Ashland.

From Cape Town they were to have sailed along the African coast to the Congo river. A river steamer was then to take them 1,000 miles to their destination.

TRIAL DELAYED

Jury Hearing In Bellvill Morals Case Postponed.

The jury trial of Alfred Collin 51, one of seven Bellville residen cited three weeks ago in connec tion with a morals case in th village, was continued indefinitel today at the request of Atty. A S. Beach, his counsel.

Meanwhile, a Butler man wa held in the county jail for stat parole officers after he was ar rested by Sheriff Frank E. Rob inson on a charge of sodomy.

The Collins trial was scheduled to open this morning. Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer said, however, that the common pleas courtroom where the trial will be held probably would not be available for several days.

He added that hearings for five other persons, including Mr. and Mrs. Verne Stambaugh, parents of two girls involved in the case would not be conducted until after the Collins trial.

The girls, 16 and 17 years old, have been ill with measles.

Held for the parole officers was Walter Taylor, 41, who operates a picture frame shop in Butler. The sheriff said Taylor, who was paroled last year from a New York state prison, was cited on charges involving two or three boys from 10 to 12 years old.

GALION COUPLE WED 50 YEARS

200 Friends and Relatives Call on Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Frank, Sunday.

GALION—One of the few smaller towns to hold a major celebration of I Am An American Day, Galion had an estimated crowd of 3,000 persons at Heise park Sunday afternoon to hear an address by Allan Tarshish widely known radio speaker.

Hundreds of persons lined the streets to witness the parade of some 500 persons that marched from the public square to the park.

Warning the American people of the danger that is now at our doorstep, threatening our very existence as a nation, Tarshish dynamically addressed the crowd that filled the bleachers at the park.

"Prejudices, jealousies, hates, are combined in the force that represents our danger," the speaker said. "The future of each and every American," he stressed, "depends upon how we meet this danger . . . freedom and liberty belongs to the future, and not the so-called "new order" which is the slavery of the past."

He warned that while the forces of Nazism, Facism and Communism, are being fought where they are visible in organized groups, such as bunds, and bands, the enemy is really working invisibly. The battle cry of the "new order" groups is "divide and rule," the speaker said. "Their technique used is propaganda that appeals to the loves, hates and ambitions of all peoples."

A united effort on the part every American is needed to fight our present danger, the speaker continued.

Services at the park opened with the flag raising exercises by the Galion High school band; pledge of allegiance led by Tom King; invocation, Rev. W. N. Robertson of First Methodist church; selection by the Eagles' band; welcome by Mayor W. M. King; introduction of speaker by O. E. Hill, superintendent of schools; the address, and closing selection by the High school band.

Four musical groups, the American Legion Drum and Bugle corps, the Galion High school band, the Eagles' band and the Leesville high school were in the parade of citizens, Boy and Girl Scouts, city officials, civic leaders and fraternal organizations.

Can Congress Cut Expenditures?

IT'S A STRANGE THING, the way our American government operates at times.

Take, for instance, the administration's suggestion that non-defense expenditures ought to be cut by a billion dollars a year, to offset some of the staggering increase in defense expenditures.

The president gives the congress a free hand to decide where this reduction should be made. And what does congress do? With the exception of a few outspoken and hardy members, they shy away from the proposal. There must be something wrong with it, they seem to think.

They would prefer to have the chief executive, or at least his budget bureau, give them some idea as to where the cuts should be made and how much they should be.

However, it's a pretty safe bet, if congress had been handed a list of proposed cuts in various governmental agencies, that a terrific howl would have gone up from members of congress.

The president, congressmen would have complained, would be trying to dictate to the congress what it should do. And there would have been scores of objections to cuts in this department and that—because each complainant would have envisaged a slash in the amount of government money going to his district.

There would have been criticisms galore of the unfairness of any suggested plan.

Well, no presidential plan has been suggested. Let's see how the congress can handle the task without being "dictated" to.

One thing it can be sure of—tax-paying Americans, not complaining about defense taxes—are anxious to have non-defense expenditures cut. And quickly!

Unswerving French Confidence

INTRIGUING is a dispatch from Vichy, France, which explains that France is seeking general voluntary political agreement with Germany "in full confidence" that Adolf Hitler would keep his word (concerning a generous peace agreement).

French confidence, apparently, is so unshakable that it can overlook Hitler's pledges that he had no further territorial claims in Europe (Before Poland) and his protestations of friendliness for Holland and Belgium (before the Lowlands invasion) to say nothing of his disinterest in any Balkan activity.

We seem to recall having heard, some time, some place, that the French were a sort of logical people. That must have been wrong.

Another dispatch tells of a message of "friendly greetings" sent by Hitler to the Turkish government.

The Turks had better have a different kind of confidence than the French.

Movable Towns Foreseen

FACTORY-MADE homes may soon be produced in large quantities and varied designs. They can not only be assembled in a day or two, but can be taken down quickly and moved to another location without losing anything but the foundation. Such houses may be made of wood, cement blocks, sheet steel, plywood or other materials. Here is a new industry already born and likely to grow fast.

One obvious use for such houses is military cantonments. Their lightness, simplicity and flexibility seem to make them almost as easily erected as tents. They could be permanent, or moved quickly from one encampment to another when needed. There could be whole towns of such construction and they might even be utilized by share-croppers when that industry is properly organized.

Flowers and Their Names

WRITING about his garden and one thing and another, a column contributor says: "When my mother took over this garden nearly half a century ago, it was noted for its old-fashioned flowers. Now I plant onions in it. I think I could like flowers if I could remember their names. Some people know the names of flowers and birds and diseases, and like them all. And they like them because they can remember their names."

This last statement is questionable, but it may be true. Clever people who know all the flowers by their first names may deeply love them; and then again, they may just like the flowers, and like to talk about them, because the names come to their lips so easily. Some people are that way about history and fiction and music.

Farm Experts See New Hey-Day

By JACK STINNETT

(This is the first of a series of three articles on the farmer and national defense.)

WASHINGTON — What the war, national defense and the lend-lease program are doing to the American farmer is one of the strangest paradoxes in this strangest of all world situations.

On one hand, the real or potential world markets which mean the difference between a fair living and poverty to the growers of our "surplus" crops (principally cotton, tobacco and wheat) have been wiped out.

On the other hand, such a demand for other farm products is being created that it is quite possible thousands of American farmers are entering a new era. It won't be an era of "sky's-the-limit" prosperity, but officials believe it should be one of decent living and fair return. And if the Department of Agriculture carries out its present aims, this era won't be followed by black depression, dust storms and starving Joads such as came in the wake of the World War.

Surplus Piling Up.

To take the gloomy side first: In recent years about half of some of our types of tobacco, 20 per cent of our cotton, 20 to 50 per cent of some fruits and five per cent of our wheat were sold abroad.

Normally about 2,000,000 farm folk depended for their livelihood on farm products sold to continental Europe and another 2,000,000 depended on farm products sold to the United Kingdom.

According to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the value of farm products exported in the six months ending in February of this year amounted to only $155,000,000—compared with $489,000,000 in the corresponding six months a year earlier (the first six months of the war). Until just recently, farm exports continued to hang around that all-time low level to which they plunged soon after the collapse of France a year ago.

The surpluses and prospective crops of wheat, cotton and tobacco are staggering. When the new-crop cotton starts moving to market, it is estimated the old-crop surplus will be nearly 14,000,000 bales—almost enough to supply domestic and foreign demands if not an ounce of cotton were picked until 1942. The wheat supply for the coming season is estimated by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard at 1,236,000,000 bushels, with consumption and exports recently averaging 755,000,000 bushels. A department expert who should know told me the other day that tobacco exports had dropped to their lowest level since before the Civil War.

But Prices Are At Peak.

These facts and figures make Joe Farmer's future look about as bright as that of an ice cream salesman in Antarctica, but these facts and figures don't tell all.

In the first place, cotton and tobacco (and peanut) farmers already have voted curtailed marketing quotas which will reduce the size of these crops this year. The wheat farmers vote May 31. Although there is no certainty how they will cast their ballots, if they vote as some agriculture department officials predict it will give the department control of wheat marketing quotas for the first time.

In the second place, prices actually received by farmers recently reached the highest level since the war started. The reasons were fourfold: (1) Proposed government price supporting measures to stimulate production of hogs, dairy and poultry products; (2) trade expectations that government loan rates will be increased on cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice; (3) prospective lend-lease purchases of farm products estimated around half a billion dollars; (4) increased consumer buying power.

Listen World!

A War-Time Prayer

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DEAR GOD,
Who made me woman,
Hear my prayer.
Show me my chance
To help this world's despair.
Me go and do,
But women stay and wait—
Often of late
I feel as meaningless and far
As if I were adrift
On some burnt star,
Yet still I hear
The constant sob and shriek
Of pain and fear
That tear my heart;
O, Father, give me part
Of this grim fight;
Help me to find
Some special service
For my hands and mind,
Some job within
This torn and tragic hell
Which just a common woman
Can do well.

You know
I am not wise,
Nor trained in skill.
I can't outwit
Suave diplomats and spies,
Nor march in drill
Nor build a ship,
A cannon or a plane,
Nor even organize
The simple folk
With whom I live.
I'm just a mother
And a housewife, God,
And all the little gestures
That I make
Seem so in vain
I sometimes wonder if
There's any place for me
In all this pain.
Oh Father, help me see
The job I should do—
And, having seen it,
Help me carry through!

I sweep the floor;
I spread the bed with sweet,
Clean-smelling sheets;
I make the kitchen neat
And keep the babies safe
From off the street;
And take my neighbor,
Who is sick,
A pot of jam.
And, all the time,
I wonder if I am
Of any use
In this distracted world.

Is it enough, God,
Just to hold the Faith?
To place within my window
One small, steady light,
So that poor spirits
Fleeing through the night,
Their hope all gone,
May see—and know
That kindliness goes on
And somewhere there's a haven,
From the bloody storm?

Is it enough
To rock a babe to sleep?
To mend a shirt
And keep a cake-box filled
And plant the same
Spring pansies in a row,
So, seeing them,
Some reeling mind may know
That Life goes on
As You would have it go?

Is it enough to keep myself serene,
Though I may have no part
Within that larger scene
Yet, by my sane, sure grasp
On what is true
Help others see
Your Vision shining through?

IF THAT'S ENOUGH,
THEN, GOD, I KNOW
THAT I'VE A JOB
THAT I CAN DO
AND SO I ASK YOU—
HELP ME SEE IT
THROUGH!

"Cardinal" Virtues.

They are justice, prudence, temperance and fortitude; but why do we call them cardinal virtues?

We have it from an old Roman custom.

"Cardinal" stems from the Latin cardo the hinge of a door and figuratively extended to that on which a thing turns or depends.

Hence the use of the word in the sense of "principal" or "pre-eminent"—as the cardinal points of the compass, cardinal numbers and cardinal virtues.

Let's Look Around

At the End of the Lincoln Trail

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

SPRINGFIELD, ILL—Those who have followed the Lincoln trail from his birthplace in a Kentucky log cabin to this Springfield scene of his later activities and triumphs, find the name of Abraham Lincoln so deeply etched in the consciousness of every adult and child in this capital city of Illinois that the Great Emancipator seems to continue as a vital part of this community instead of being merely a beloved memory.

In magnificent pieces of statuary, by pictures taken at every stage of his career, in the thousands of books, pamphlets and brochures which have been assembled and carefully preserved, and, finally, in the Lincoln tomb and monument, to which more than 150,000 Americans journey each year, the memory of Lincoln is kept alive in this community, where he is a reality rather than an historical figure.

* * * * *

OF SPECIAL interest at this end of the Lincoln trail is the prominent part that a native Mansfielder and graduate of the Mansfield high school, has played in the research work involved in adding constantly to the wealth of Lincoln material that had already been assembled here. It is Paul M. Angle who came to Springfield 16 years ago to take a position in the research organization and who has since become librarian of the Illinois State Historical Library and secretary of the Abraham Lincoln association. As a part of his work he edits the Abraham Lincoln Quarterly and the Journal of the Illinois Historical Society.

Articles on Lincoln by Ernest J. Wesson, Mansfield historian and collector of rare books, have found a place in a year book and other publications of the society.

The Lincoln home, corner Eighth and Jackson streets, is another of the shrines which has been acquired by the state of Illinois, for preservation in quite nearly its appearance when it was occupied by the Lincolns from 1844 to 1861, when he was called to the presidency. A visit to the Lincoln home is a part of tour of all who come to Springfield, and callers number many hundreds each day during spring, summer and fall.

* * * * *

FROM Indianapolis to Springfield turned out to be a pleasant 200-mile drive through an area of rich farm land, with mile after mile of black soil under cultivation and giving an idea of how Illinois comes to rank fourth among the states in value of agricultural products.

But travelers on route 36 will do well to keep in mind that a bridge at Montezuma collapsed a few weeks ago, just after a too-heavy truck had gone over it, and a 16-mile detour is required to get to the next block. Nice to learn these things before you get there.

* * * * *

DECATUR, ILL., has hit on the plan of keeping traffic speed on its main street moving steadily at a 20-mile pace by timing its traffic lights to change just often enough to allow motorists traveling at 20 miles an hour to move along without making any stops—but the blocks are uniform in length, which simplifies this plan.

Springfield has no one-way traffic streets but left turns are not permitted at down-town intersections and much confusion and danger to pedestrians is thus avoided. Heavy traffic in the city of 80,000 population moves smoothly and with better observance of speed limits than is seen in some smaller cities.

This is the second Springfield we have encountered thus far, and there seems to be another one looming ahead—but there's something further to be said about the Lincoln trail—the New Salem part of it, which must be seen before we leave this vicinity.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

America First Committee Backs Women Pickets at White House

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—In front of the White House these days a group of about ten women pace back and forth, back and forth. They look a little bedraggled, a bit weary. Over their shoulders are signs which identify them as part of the "perpetual vigil" being staged by the American Peace Mobilization.

These women may not know it, but they are only a small cog in a tremendous propaganda machine. Behind them and behind other phases of the streamlined lobby now bearing down on Washington is one of the most adroitly maneuvered campaigns the capital has seen in years. The lobby against the Holding Company act was peanuts in comparison.

Origin of the campaign was a secret meeting of the inner command of the America First committee, spark-plug of the entire isolationist movement.

At this meeting, America First leaders reported that Roosevelt was hesitating about convoys because of the uncertainty of public sentiment. So they decided that the best way to keep him from acting was to pound him with a barrage of hostile demonstrations. Mass meetings, street rallies, picket lines, newspaper advertisements, and especially the mails were to be mobilized for the attack.

To carry on the campaign large donations were solicited, or volunteered from various big industrialists, most of them from around Chicago—also from other sources. The committee is not required to file its finances with congress, so the extent of the contributions may never be known. But $100,000 was to be spent on newspaper advertisements alone.

Opening gun of this carefully planned drive was Lindbergh's speech in Madison Square Garden. Later came Herbert Hoover's anti-convoy broadcast. There will be more.

Uncle Sam's Mail.

But the chief pressure weapon decided upon was mail—aimed not at congress but directly at the White House. The isolationists wisely concluded that the question of convoys would not be decided by congress, but by the president. So he became the chief target of their fire.

Thus all the speeches, rallies, picket lines, etc., are the ballyhoo for the mail drive. And they are producing results. The White House has said nothing about it, but mail has jumped to huge proportions in recent weeks. Truckloads are dumped at the executive offices daily—most of the letters against convoys.

As a by-product, a lot of this mail also has been going to congress, and the services of various good ladies have been enlisted to help answer it. The offices of Senators Wheeler, McCarran, Clark, Nye and other isolationists are a beehive of busy workers.

Senatorial Cooperation.

One senator who benefits by this mail is the ebullient Bob Reynolds of North Carolina, publisher of "The Vindicator," a newspaper sometimes charged with friendship for fascism. Apparently Senator Reynolds has a close working agreement with other isolationist senators for the benefit of his subscription list.

For when L. A. McGillivray of Monterey, Cal., wrote to Senator Wheeler and signed himself "L. A. (Quizzling) McGillivray," Mr. McGillivray received in return a copy of Senator Reynolds' "Vindicator."

McGillivray, who vigorously disagrees with Wheeler, had written him a kidding letter saying: "Please look me up when you arrive on the West Coast. I have some ideas and perhaps we can cook something up." But apparently Wheeler and Reynolds took him seriously.

Roosevelt's Speech.

Real fact is that the deluge of letters had a lot to do with the change in Roosevelt's original plan to deliver a Pan-American speech May 14. Close advisers urged him to use the radio to mould public opinion, rather than let an organized mail campaign mould foreign policy.

Inside reasons for the subsequent postponement of the speech were: (1) he didn't think congress was ready to go along on anything as drastic as convoys; and (2) this was one of the biggest decisions to be made by a president of the United States in 150 years, and Roosevelt didn't want to make it without further study.

Mr. and Mrs. Garganiua.

Evie Robert, glamorous wife of the ex-secretary of the Democratic National committee, gave a cocktail party for John Ringling North, manager of the circus, and suggested that her honored guest might bring along Mr. and Mrs. Gargantua, the giant gorilla couple.

"Sorry," came the regret, "but Washington society might scare them to death."

B. A. B.'s (British Alphabet Bureaus)

The administrative machinery which Great Britain has set up in Washington to expedite war shipments is becoming almost as bureau-ized as the New Deal, and the resemblance doesn't end there. The British also have taken to New Deal nomenclature—the alphabet stuff.

There are now six different missions and commissions located in as many buildings in the capital, with a total staff of over 1,200, of which 200 are American clerks and stenographers.

The agencies are the British Admiralty Technical Mission, devoted solely to procuring naval supplies; the Air Commission, the Merchant Shipping Mission, the Food Mission, the Purchasing Commission and the Military Mission. All are offshoots of a central governing body known as the British Supply Council.

"We have begun to refer to our different branches alphabetically, a la the New Deal," says affable Leslie Chance of the supply council. "It's much handier. The admiralty mission is known as the BTAM, the purchasing commission as the BPC, and so on."

Note—A reporter asked Chance how to pronounce his name. "Suit yourself," he grinned. "In the south of England they call me Chawnce and in the north it's Chance."

Capital Chaff.

During the recent uproar over Secretary Frances Perkins' bungling of defense strikes, Mrs. Roosevelt paid her an unexpected visit. Visitors heard cries of "Eleanor" and "Fanny" as the two prominent ladies embraced. Miss Perkins long ago would have been replaced but for the strong support of Mrs. Roosevelt.

LORD DUNMORE, in his famous expedition against Indian towns along the Scioto in 1774 descended the Ohio and reached the mouth of the Great Hockhocking, in Athens county.

He established a depot and erected some defences, called Fort Gower, then marched up the valley of the river, until he reached the present site of Logan. From that point he proceeded to the Scioto, where the war was concluded by a treaty with the hostile tribes at Camp Charlotte.

Dunmore, on his return, stopped at Fort Gower where a declaration of independence was made by the troops almost two years before July 4, 1776, thus giving Ohio a claim to a part in the utterances of the pioneers for independence.

The village of Hockinport grew up around the old stockade. On Nov. 10, 1923, the D. A. R. erected a marker on the site of Fort Gower.

A Farmer's Diary

Old Indian Legend

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MORE than a mile eastward from our home, along the Clearfork, there is allegedly a solitary Indian grave. Often I have wandered through the level bottom land south of where the railroad runs, searched among purple violets, buttercups and waves of forgetmenots, looked carefully along thick-turfed borders of cultivated fields. Nowhere have I found the mark or sign for which I looked.

After early settlers had carved their farms out of the heavily timbered land, Indian tribes would still return from west and camp along the stream in autumn. White men and Indians lived together in peace, often visiting back and forth.

One early autumn when wild fruits and nuts were very abundant a boy became very ill at the Indian camp, and in spite of all the efforts of the medicine men, died the following day. He had been alert, clear of mind, strong of body, skilled and agile of movement — a future leader of their tribe. Now they chose a spot beneath the virgin woodland soil and laid him there to rest.

Perhaps a dirge was chanted, or strange words were spoken as they sifted the healing earth above him. When all was done, perhaps a hand most loving of all pulled a gentian or a purple aster root and transplanted it upon the precious mound. Then they departed. Several years went by. More settlers had come and made their homes. Indians were seldom seen.

Then, on a hazy autumn day, a silent cavalcade of Indian ponies with erect bronzed riders came down the valley. The afternoon sun sent its gentle rays through the treetops, gorgeous with autumn coloring. The riders made a circle about the solitary grave and reverently performed last rates for the Indian youth who had been buried there. No red men were seen in this valley after that.

By word of mouth, from that early day until now, this little Indian legend has been preserved. I tell it to you as an old man told it to me.

Love—By Trial and Error + + +

By Kathrn Bemis (Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER XXII

"I know. Anyone would think we hadn't a worry in the world—outside of—of love—to hear me talk, wouldn't they?" She sounded very forlorn.

Then she brightened pluckily. "I refuse to get into the doldrums, Bill. Nothing bad is going to happen to you—to us! I won't let it!"

He grinned a little crookedly.

"Just how do you propose to prevent this, Miss Optimist?"

"Frankly, I've no idea," she confessed, speaking slowly. "But when love is big enough—it can work miracles."

"It can fill you with a lot of illusions—silly ones, perhaps. But illusions are not for us, Raye. You'll marry a man in your own set—live to laugh over your affair with a gas-station aspirant—one who gazed too long at a star."

The pain in his dear hazel eyes, his quickly indrawn breath, played dangerously on her heartstrings.

"Bill, Bill!" her heart cried wildly. "You brought me here tonight, thinking you could be strong enough in such a place to give me up. No music to stir the senses or quicken the heartbeat! Nothing but good food and straight-from-the-shoulder talk; You thought you could put over! Oh, Bill—I won't allow it—I won't!"

"Raye—will you promise me something?"

He set aside the crystal vase of bronze chrysanthemums between them and squarely met her troubled eyes across the small table.

"Anything—within reason, Bill."

"Will you forget me—please?"

"Why?"

"I've already told you why. We'd never hit it off, Raye. It's all wrong in your mind."

"Very well, then. We'll stop loving each other—enjoy the pain of it." Her tone was mocking.

"Don't make it any more difficult than it is, Raye."

She smiled slowly and took a pink frosted cake now offered by a waiter.

After he had gone away, she inquired innocently, "Will you be at Lottie Neff's dinner dance Thursday? She said she'd invited you."

* * *

Lottie was one of the few members of Raye's old crowd who had remained in town for the summer. So many of them had drifted away that people decidedly on the fringe of Wilville's smart set during the winter season now were included to make an adequate showing at any gathering.

"Yes—I'm invited. I'm taking Rosalind."

"You're—you're taking Rosalind?" Raye swallowed the lump in her throat. "Well, that's nice. I'm going with Rex. Perhaps I'll see you there."

"Don't be sarcastic, Raye. The invitation came to me through Rosalind—so naturally, I offered to take her."

"Naturally."

"Now that you and I have decided not to see each other too much . . ."

"Have we?"

"It's settled, and you know it. I started to say—as matters now stand, I'd rather not run into you so often. Anyway, until my case comes to trial, I'll no doubt be gloriously snubbed by most of the four hundred around here."

"Not by—Rosalind, surely. She seems to be your good friend," Raye said.

"You see—there's some talk of her father finding a place for me in his office—after I'm cleared of—of . . ."

Raye was instantly on the alert. She said, "So you actually expect to be—cleared?"

He fidgeted in his chair.

"Given a clever lawyer, there's always that chance, isn't there?"

"I've frequently had a suspicion you were shielding some one, Bill—even had a suspicion it might be—me."

His face flushed through its tan. "That—that would be a big order, my dear. Even if I—if I loved you very much. Don't you think so?"

"I—I don't know," she told him thoughtfully. "A man could be foolish enough to—to make such a sacrifice, I suppose."

She gave him a steady look, attempting to read his thoughts. But his face told her nothing.

Bill was so evasive, so noncommittal about their love for each other, that Raye did not exactly know what to do about it.

"You must concede it's pretty swell of Mr. Grinner to have faith in me now." Bill nervously rumpled his already disordered light hair.

"Yes—you evidently owe him a great deal. Things like—showing an interest in his daughter."

Bill scowled. "Rosalind's good company. I like her—but that's as far as it will ever go."

Raye wanted to say, "You don't know Ros!" But instead she savagely nibbled a hard almond cake. It was just too bad if Bill Anderson were one of those men who couldn't see through a woman's wiles. But then, she might be obliged to use a few herself before she was through with him!

Now, however, the thought of Rosalind rankled in her mind. Ros was apparently out to get her man—with the assistance of papa!

Then suddenly Raye's eyes showed fear, terror. She and Bill leaped from their chairs at the sound of a terrific explosion. The whole place began to fill rapidly with dense black smoke.

Before Raye and Bill wholly grasped what had happened, flames were threatening them from all sides. Women were screaming, fighting to reach exits, men shoving and pushing along with them. Human nature glared raw, seemed scarcely removed from the stone age, as this frantic crowd jammed in front of doors leading to outside safety.

"Come on, Raye—hurry!" cried Bill, throwing an arm around her waist and running her toward the revolving door.

But too many people, hysterical with fright, were already there. A frenzy of self-preservation was everywhere in evidence. Women fainted. Other women, and even men, tried to leap over them.

Even the sound of the swiftly approaching sirens of fire-fighting apparatus sent no confidence through this crazed mob now.

The smoke was clearing slightly now, but the flames were feeding on light silk drapes, Chinese paper screens and paper lanterns hanging from the ceiling.

Raye clung frantically to Bill.

He dragged her swiftly to the rear of the room. With his bare hands, he threw aside a burning screen, knocked the glass out of a closed window that no one else had yet discovered. Roaring flames threatened from all directions as he held Raye in front of him and lifted her outside to safety.

She dropped easily the few feet to the ground and immediately Bill jumped out after her.

But his coat was blazing now and his bleeding hands were filled with glass.

A fireman ran up and smothered the flames on Bill's coat, just as he sank unconscious at Raye's feet.

"Ambulance will be along in a minute, lady," the fireman, reassured Raye, quickly gathering Bill's limp figure in his arms. "I'll lay him out by the curb—and you can watch out for him. I've got to get into the building and help the others out."

"Yes—hurry—they'll all be killed!" burst out the terror-stricken Raye.

She trotted breathlessly along to keep up with the fireman's swift pace. They weaved in and out the rapidly gathering crowd of spectators, stumbling over fire hose, dodging busy, shouting firemen who were valiantly trying to bring order out of the confusion. Sirens screeched and gongs clanged as more fire companies came rushing to the scene. The odor of burning wood, the smoke, the tense drama peculiar to fires was filling the street with an eagerly expectant throng.

"Oh, it was horrible!" exclaimed Raye. "There was an explosion, then . . ."

"Likely a bomb—they've been having labor trouble in this restaurant," panted the fireman.

They had come to the parking space out front now and he gently laid Bill in the midst of the jabbering crowd.

Raye attempted to protect Bill as tears streamed down her soot-blackened face. She was trembling so violently she could scarcely stand.

She implored the curious onlookers, "Please—please don't get so near! Give him air—he's got to have air!"

She knelt beside Bill and cradled his head in her arms. The light of a nearby street lamp revealed how badly he had been cut and burned. She prayed that he would not revive, not begin to suffer before help came. She prayed that he would not die here in her arms.

"Oh, Bill, Bill!" she whispered passionately. "I love you so!"

A few of the curious moved off, but others hung around with morbid interest to see what would happen to this fire victim.

Other restaurant patrons were being brought out and laid on the walk beside Bill. There was the moaning and groaning of the injured, and hysterical shouting by overwrought, separated couples. Firemen bawled swift orders, policemen pushed the crowd back from the danger zone, hook and ladder companies burst on the scene simultaneously from all directions.

Through it all, Raye was numb with fright, with anxiety for her beloved one, scarcely realizing what was going on around her. Only when ambulances began to arrive did she snap back to full consciousness of the real situation. And after what seemed an agony of hours, she and Bill were riding away in one.

Bill unfortunately regained consciousness before reaching the hospital and the ambulance surgeon did what he could to alleviate Bill's suffering. Raye sat close beside him, mumbling incoherent encouragement, but she could see Bill grit his teeth as he tried to smile, and she knew she was doing little to help him.

She saw that he was settled in a private room with a special nurse. He must have the best of care, she told herself. She would meet the expense of this care herself; she knew he could not afford it. It would take more than her weekly salary to meet the bills, but she put this fact out of her mind for the present. She would manage somehow. Even if she did not love him with her whole soul, he had saved her life and she would always owe him more than she could repay.

The following morning when Raye arrived at the office, she found a note on her desk from Rex, saying that he had taken the midnight train for New York and would be busy there with his publisher for at least two weeks. The few humorous sentences which ordinarily might have caused her to smile now brought only a discouraged sigh.

What horrible luck! She wouldn't be able to draw ahead on her salary—and she was certain she could have talked Rex into it—so Bill's hospital expenses could not be entirely met. Probably, when Bill discovered what these expenses were, he'd make a fuss and she'd have to argue him out of not having the best of everything done for himself. She would remind him of her love, tell him that things were fifty-fifty between them from now on. She would talk to the hospital people and try to arrange everything smoothly.

But she was worried. The day dragged on miserably. She had nothing important to do here in the office but practice her shorthand and typing. However, she must attend the business college classes as usual and not neglect any part of the course Rex had so kindly given her. She couldn't see Bill until evening. She had called the hospital, been told that no visitors would be allowed to see him until then, and now had visions of Bill racked with pain and needing her desperately.

She found it impossible to concentrate. Especially, after the noon mail delivery.

A letter had come from Aunt Susan filled with a vivid account of her bad luck and unhappiness. She was, she wrote, sadly in need of funds. Clarissa Bell's shop had not been doing very well.

"Could you, darling," begged Aunt Susan, "please send me fifty dollars? When one must think of room rent—imagine your aunt in a room—isn't it outrageous? I hate to trouble you, dear, but I presume Rex Maine gives you a fine salary. He's such a steady, ambitious felow. Why not marry him?"

Fifty dollars? Raye laughed bitterly. Might as well ask for a slice of the moon as far as she was concerned! Poor auntie! Trying to be a financial wizard! Now—what in the world could you do with a woman like that?

Raye buried her face in her arms on the desk and broke into racking sobs.

'PRISONER SWINDLE' REVIVED BUT HE'S IN MEXICO NOW

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — That venerable racket—the one about the prisoner in Mexico who has a fortune in the United States—is flourishing these days, according to reports from both sides of the border.

Lured by the easy prospect of rapidly acquiring one-third of a fortune of $285,000 in cash by simply taking a trip to Mexico and investing a few thousand dollars, substantial citizens of the United States are frequently being victimized by the "prisoner."

Then, when their funds are gone, they learn that for centuries people have been falling for this same bait, or variations thereof. Countless residents of the British Isles and the Continent were trapped by the Spanish prisoner of Tarragona from times dating back to before the Napoleonic Wars. In recent years, with irregular mail service to and from Spain and with travel even more restricted, the swindlers who operate from Mexico have far outstripped the Spanish syndicate

During the past 12 years, this correspondent has had numerous occasions to report actual cases of swindles to cable messages of warning which United States consuls have sent out in endeavor to reduce the toll of these operatives, and to be consulted by people who have received correspondents from the "prisoner's" agents.

Here is what happens when a "sucker" gets interested. He answers and receives a reply asking him to come to Mexico City, stay at a certain hotel, where a man (who is described) will meet him in the lobby at a certain time. He is to give this man $5,000 and he will then go to the penitentiary to see the prisoner, and get the baggage check for the trunk said to be at Laredo, Tex., just across the border, with $285,000 in a secret compartment.

The man is then presumably to go to Laredo, get the suitcase, return to Mexico City with it and keep his share. The bankrupt prisoner will then be able to pay the court-costs of his case and obtain his release. An additional bait, the "daughter," or "beautiful 18-year-old daughter," as she is sometimes referred to, is thrown in to lure anybody who might have amorus, as well as money-making inclinations.

After the first "contact" in Mexico City, where the victim hands over his money, he waits and waits and never hears from the go-between any more. Some victims then return silently to the United States, while others complain to the police. Dossiers on this subject are filed at the penitentiary in Mexico. The United States consulate-general has a similar one, and the Post Office Department also has extensive records. Correspondence on the subject indicate that often "prospects are thrilled over the proposition" and that "common sense explanations are of no avail."

ENERGY GREAT

BRECKENRIDGE, Tex.—(U.P.)—If the energy spent raising windows could be used in the national defense—a reporter for the Breckenridge high school paper figured that in one schoolhouse alone the windows are raised and lowered 42,944 times a year.

Do FALSE TEETH Rock, Slide or Slip?

FASTEETH, an improved powder to be sprinkled on upper or lower plates, holds false teeth more firmly in place. Do not slide, slip or rock. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. FASTEETH is alkaline (non-acid). Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

SOCIETY & CLUB

ANNUAL UNIVERSITY TEA TO BE HELD MAY 27

Eighty-Five Senior High School Girls Will Be Guests of Mansfield Branch, A. A. U. W. for Tea and Program at Country Club.

PLANS are being completed for the annual Senior Tea to be given by the Mansfield branch, American Association of University Women Tuesday, May 27 at the Westbrook Country club from 2 to 4 o'clock. Miss Ruth Dunham is general chairman for the program which will be presented by Miss Florence Partridge, dean of women at Heidelberg college, Tiffin.

More than 85 young women will be guests of the association to hear Miss Partridge, who is one of the youngest college deans in this part of the country. Each year the meeting is held for senior girls who intend to further their education following high school graduation.

Members of the various committees are as follows: program and music, Miss Fannie Lew Eller, chairman, Mrs. Tom Hoffman, Miss Wilma Snider; place, Mrs. John Graham, chairman, Mrs. George Hypes, Miss Pearl Danback and Miss Nellie Mae Tingley; decorations, Mrs. K. E. Buhr, chairman, Mrs. Harold Burns, Mrs. A. G. Earnshaw and Mrs. H. L. Gilbert; transportation, Mrs. Frank Maxwell, chairman, Mrs. Harrison Alvord and Mrs. Dan Haber; invitations, Miss Beatrice McLees, chairman, Miss Margaret Tinsley and Miss Emma Waring. Miss Marjorie Campbell will be in charge of favors.

Colorful Suit

Winner for Spring is this wool suit of deftly united pastels selected by Anne Shirley, winsome RKO Radio star who will appear in "The Devil and Daniel Webster." The plaid, which features the new large squares blocked off to nearly lose their identity, is of blue and yellow beige—background is of pale, pale pink, as is Anne's off-the-face hat. The three-button suit sponsors flap pockets and notched lapels. The bias skirt is slightly flared with a single box pleat in front and back.

Open House Held For Newlyweds

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Almy (the former Kitty Birch) were honored at a reception Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. Almy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Almy, 123 Rae avenue. Open house was held both in the afternoon and evening. Twenty relatives were present for a social time in the afternoon and 30 in the evening.

The home was attractively decorated with garden flowers and the color scheme for the table appointments was in green and white. Tall lighted tapers and a white floral centerpiece decorated the serving table for the refreshments.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Russell Sowash and James Sowash of Bucyrus.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary Here

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maglott, 553 East Townview circle, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Sunday with a family party at the Johns' park pavilion. Thirty-five guests were seated at one long table decorated with silver streamers and a centerpiece composd of a minature bridal couple.

The afternoon was spent socially and the group presented the honoree with miscellaneous gifts. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Willard Grooms and family of Berea, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McFarland and daughter, of Delaware.

BUSINESS SESSION.

Members of the Bethany class of the Mansfield Gospel Center held their regular business meeting recently at the church. Miss Dorothy Stambaugh, president, conducted the business meeting and led the devotions. Contests were played and the prize won by Miss Juanita Guill. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. The next meeting will be a wiener roast.

TO HAVE LUNCHEON.

Congenial Art club members will hold their regular meeting Wednesday noon at the home of Mrs. J. O. Byers, Highland avenue. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon.

Willing Workers' Class Has Meeting

Two guests, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lyon, attended a recent meeting of the Willing Workers' class of the First Brethren church when they met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Richards, 152½ South Diamond street. A short business session was conducted by the president, Mrs. Lewis Cline.

Games and contests were the diversion of the evening. Prizes were won by Mrs. Lewis Cline, Mrs. Elmer Carruthers and Cecil Friend. Lunch was served at the close of the evening. The next meeting will be held June 21 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cline, 22 Dunbilt court.

CLASS MEETING.

I. H. N. class of the United Brethren church will meet Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Arthur Nogle, 306 Dudley avenue.

Jane D. Meyers Will Wed June 15 At St. Paul Church

June 15 is the date chosen by Miss Jane Dorene Meyers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Meyers, 662 West Third street, for her marriage to Leonard Burkholder, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Burkholder, 139 Rowland avenue. The wedding will be solemnized at 4 o'clock in an open church service at the St. Paul Lutheran church. Attendants will be the bride-elect's two sisters, Miss La Nola Meyers of Mansfield, and Miss Gwynedd Meyers of Columbus. Richard Falk of Mansfield will serve as best man.

Friends learned of the coming nuptials at a party given Saturday afternoon at the Meyers home. They discovered the wedding date when they matched miscellaneous kitchen articles drawn from a fishing pond. A picnic type lunch was served at three small tables which were decorated with miniature wells at which a tny bride was fishing. Games were the diversion and prizes were won by Miss Josephine Meyers and Mrs. Hugh Sturgeon, which they gave to the honoree. Trs bride's mother gave her a gift of crystal.

Miss Gwynedd Meyers of Columbus was the only out-of-town guest present.

Four of a Kind—Cottons Popular

Four of kind—Lanz of Salzburg doubles the twin fashion trend to arrive at this sweetly garbed family of four. The girls' aprons and the boy's overalls pick up one color from the brightly printed cotton dresses. The man of the house refused to conform.

Make Accessories At Home for New Spring Outfits

Dress up your blacks and navies with a flame red or kelly green jerkin. A bondfast zipper sewn along the underarm opening molds the jerkin to your figure. If you are using a lightweight fabric, be sure to get the new dainty zippers which drape as softly as the fabric itself.

A really smart accent to your outfit is a purse and hat to match your dress. With a little imagination you can design these yourself, but patterns are readily obtainable. Matching accessories give an outfit that expensive "made to order" look. Last year's wardrobe, carefully remodeled, can be as much the talk of the town as a completely new one.

Home sewing is fun, and there's nothing difficult about it. And if your clothes appetite is bigger than your pocketbook, now is the time to learn to sew. You can have clothes of better quality for less money, if you sew yourself, not to mention individuality in color and style, and better fit. Also, there's a very definite feeling of satisfaction that one gets from the creating of something smart and wearable from a few yards of fabric and two spools of thread. All the standard patterns will give you adequate instruction as to cutting and sewing the garment. And if you are still not too confident of your skill, you might get some free instruction at your local department store or sewing machine shop. Beginners may be cheered by the thought that 50 per cent of all American women sew all or part of the clothes in their own wardrobes—and it is a known fact that the average American woman is the best dressed in the world.

Choose your fabrics, follow your budget, sew and save—and have fun doing it!

SGT. ROBERT C. KASER of the 112th regiment has returned to Camp Shelby, Miss., after spending a 15-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Kaser, 147 Wolfe avenue. . . . Mrs. Helen Hazenhal, Glessner avenue, and Mrs. George Ewing, Rae avenue, spent the week-end in Cleveland, where they attended a Mother-Daughter banquet held at St. Vincent's Charity hospital. They were guests of their daughters, Louise Hazenhal and Mary Ewing, who will graduate from the hospital training course in September.

MRS. JACOB SCHMIDT FETED AT TEA PARTY

Misses Helen Hartnett and Ruby Boyer Entertain At Susie Janis Home Sunday For Recent Bride, Miss Alice Ladd; Honored With Shower.

MISSES Helen Hartnett and Ruby Boyer entertained Sunday afternoon at a tea from 2 to 5 o'clock at the Susie Janis home in honor of Mrs. Jacob Schmidt, the former Alice Ladd. Mrs. C. R. Ladd, mother of the honoree, poured at the tea table. Iris and lighted green tapers decorated the room.

During the afternoon the honoree was given a shower of crystal. The table upon which the gifts were placed was centered with a white trellis and a miniature bride and groom. White sweet peas and roses covered the trellis. During the tea a poem, which was written by R. H. Sotherland, was read. The hostesses presented the honoree with a gift of crystal and a bracelet made of sweet peas and roses.

Student Music Hears Program At Vrbanac Home

Miss Ruth Vrbanac, 350 Ruth avenue, was hostess to members of the Student Music club at her home Sunday afternoon. Miss Margery Homerick was the associate hostess. Following a brief business session in charge of Miss Gladys Kerr, the program was presented.

The musical portion of the program was given by Miss Theodora Wendt, pianist, who played two selections which she had given at her recital Friday evening. They were "Sontata" by Grieg and "Golliwog's Cakewalk." A paper on the story of the opera "Pagliacci" by Leon Cavallo, was prepared by Gilbert Ireland and read by Robert Golster. Recordings were played of the first and third acts.

Miss Kerr gave a paper on "Late Comparison of German and Italian Opera." Later refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held June 22 at the home of James Thomas, West Third street. Miss Ruth Smith and Richard Wright, the latter a student at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, will furnish the program.

Party Given For Mr. And Mrs. Heinberger

Mrs. Alb Files, 527 North Mulberry street, entertained at her home Sunday noon in honor of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heinberger, who were recently married. Twenty-five guests attended the luncheon which was served buffet style. Garden flowers decorated the luncheon table. After the luncheon the afternoon was spent socially.

The bride was the former Loretta Mae Harden, daughter of Mr. Delbert Harden and Mrs. Freda Pittenger. Mr. Heinberger is the son of Cloyd Heinberger West Fourth street.

Miss Fairfax Gives Advice In Letters

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When I married I always hoped it would be someone who would be satisfied with housekeeping. I didn't want marriage where the wife goes to work, comes home fifteen or twenty minutes before dinner and mixes up some-thing out of a can. When I became married I persuaded my bride to give up her job.

We had a nice little apartment, well furnished, and I provided her an ample allowance for running expenses and to have good food. I can say she's a perfect housekeeper and puts on excellent meals. But what I can't understand is that she insists on going to her bridge club once a week. I'm not jealous; it is a women's club, and she belonged to it before we married.

Then, she's crazy about concerts. I don't care for that sort of music, so she goes alone or with her mother. She always seems to be doing something. I married for companionship, but my wife seems to prefer gadding around several times a week.

BACHELOR HUSBAND.

My advice is that you gad with her sometimes, my dear man, especially to concerts. No one is too old to learn how to appreciate good music. Why not attend a class in musical appreciation, which are held in all large cities. Learn something of the art of music. Your life will be richer for that.

The women who nag and grow old and homely and uninteresting are the women who have no outside interests. They stick to the old griefs and complaints and enjoy poor health because they have no recreation or concern to keep them in touch with the world. I'm sure you wouldn't admire your wife half as much if she lived a narrow life.

Wants Man to Stop Drinking.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been going with a young man off and on for close to five years. He is 23 years old and has always been a heavy drinker. He is very dear to me and has asked me to marry him several times, but I hesitate on account of his drinking. He says I'm the only one who can help him. Would my love, happiness and devoted care sober him up for good? Or would I be making a mistake to marry him before he's cured?

IN DOUBT.

Many trusting women have hoped that love and devoted care would help to make a drinking man sober. But there is nothing conclusive about the experiment, which seems to have met with more failure than success. A man must have the necessary character to combat this habit, and I've heard that Alcoholics Anonymous has done wonders with men and women who are willing to co-operate. I will send you the address of the central headquarters who can tell you the chapter nearest to you.

This information will be forwarded to you upon receipt of a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

* * *

Wants Him Back.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Five weeks ago I met a man with whom I fell in love. He said he loved me and we planned our marriage. He has a good job and can give me a good home and everything a girl would want. My parents, too, are willing for this marriage to take place.

Last month we had a quarrel and I didn't see him for three weeks. Because I just couldn't go on without seeing him I went to his home, which is in another town. He was home and acted as though he were glad to see me. But when we were alone he acted indifferent. Do you think he loves me any more?

That was the last time I saw him. I do love him, Miss Fairfax, and I'm old enough to know my mind, and do want him back. Do you think it would be all right for me to go to his home again and tell him I love him and ask him to come to my home?

DISAPPOINTED.

He may be doing what is known as "teaching you a lesson." The fact that he was glad to see you when you arrived and didn't put on his show of indifference until later gives that impression. I hope you two have made up your differences by this time. And don't quarrel again.

News-Journal Page For Women

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

By MARIAN MARTIN

Slacks are back in the spotlight for sportswear! This Marian Martin style, Pattern 9723, is especially welcome, for it brings a new note to the outdoor scene in a "slack-suit"! It's a one-piece style that gives the effect of a shirt and slacks outfit but that has the advantage of "staying put" at the waist. The plunging neckline of the bloused top is very much in style and looks so feminine and young. You may choose either short, simple sleeves or long full ones. Notice the nice cut of the trousers, darted just below the neat, smooth-fitting waistband and buttoning conveniently at the left side. Though not sketched, this style can be used to make a short playsuit too. If you want to be especially dashing, let the top be in a vivid tropical print.

Pattern 9723 may be ordered only in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16, 4⅛ yards 35 inch.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"You ought to know that better than I," Mary replied surprisingly. "You packed all my things and put them away for me in boxes after I left for my honeymoon—or at least you said you were going to, and I never knew you to break your word."

"Yes, I packed them," I returned absently, my memory going back to the hectic time of Mary's marriage. Then, as if a stiletto had pricked me, I stiffened with a sudden remembrance.

As clearly as if they were before me now, I saw the tumbled and jumbled possessions Mary had left behind her. With the wonders of her trousseau accompanying her, she had asked me to give away all her old clothing except those articles, like walking boots and slacks, which she would use during the visits to the farm which she hoped to make later.

"But don't give away any of my books and papers," she said. "Put all my best books in boxes by themselves, and label them, oh best and most capable of aunts, so that I can take them when I get to keeping house later. I'll leave the selection to you.

"All the rest, she had gone on, "the trash and the diaries and the papers, just cram in one big box and stick it away in your attic. Allah, he knows, when I'll have time to look at it, but it will be there if ever I want it."

I had separated the "sheep from the goats" meticulously in that long ago sorting. And the rest I had sorted to the best of my ability and put in the big box as she had asked.

This I had labeled "Mary, Miscellaneous," and I could see now the exact corner of the attic in which I had depostied it for safe keeping.

I could see something else, too—the inside of that box, and the small notebooks of different colors which it had held. Was there a black one among them? I asked my memory the question and had an affirmative answer. Then I looked at Mary, who was watching me anxiously.

"Do you remember?" I asked, "whether you had more than one black notebook in the things you left for me to pack?"

"I know there wasn't," she said, "for you know how I hate black, except when I have to keep up with the mode of the moment by wearing it. But never, never, never do I have black around me when I can help it. All my notebooks used to be of colored leather. I had that black one, as I told you, only so Mary would be thrilled by the melodrama of it."

"Then," I said, "you did not destroy that code book. At least, I remember seeing a black notebook among all the colored ones."

"You and your wonderful memory!" she apostrophized.

"But it's over a hundred miles away," she said. "How does that help?"

"It doesn't for the minute," I told her smiling, "but it will before long. There's only one thing. If you have the book before you, will you be able to remember the code?"

"Surest thing, you know," she replied confidently.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, May 20.

Splendid opportunities for advancing upon ambitious objectives should be indicated by this days astral influences. It may be a time for seeking power, growth, expansion of interests, credit and finances with the assurance of surprising support from those in prestige and authority. There may be various angles of the unexpected in this direction, with new projects under excellent prospect of cooperation and approbation. But be wary as to schemes, deception and intrigues of a dubious nature. Work for public or community advantage. Unlooked-for changes are imminent. Exercise prudence and thrift with funds.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of exceptional opportunities for reaching high goals of power, ambition and perhaps public or social recognition or preferment. Such may involve unforeseen changes, but in all ventures beware of fraud, subtlety, intrigues and other glamorous or seductive schemes or entanglements. Also be conservative with investments; avoid a lavish use of funds either in business or personal indulgences.

A child born on this day should have much originality, independence and broad ambitions, with a generous, kindly and cordial nature, perhaps easily duped or imposed upon.

Hot Meat Stew One of Most Popular Meals

For those days when you're "in a stew" in more housekeeping ways than one, why not turn the tables and make a real one? Piping, hot meat stew is popular. So give it a chance.

It's a known fact to doctors and nutritionists today that meat packs a load of vitamins, especially the B vitamins. These vitamins, naturally present in meat, promote sparkling vitality and help guard against nervous disorders. These vitamins are not stored in the body to any extent and doctors say we need to get them everyday in order to keep well. And in stew meat as well as in other thrift cuts, you get the same food values you do in the better-known cuts.

If you'd try a new stew instead of the same old kind, try "lamb in vegetables." A recipe for it and other stews are given below:

Lamb in Vegetables.

Cut two and one-half pounds of breast of lamb in large cubes. Brown with two minced onions in hot lard. Add two and one-half cups canned tomatoes that have been heated and strained. Season with salt and pepper. Bring to boiling point. Add one and one-half pounds of small okra pods (or whole string beans). Cover and simmer until tender, adding more tomato or water if needed. Serve with boiled rice.

Irish Stew with Dumplings.

2 pounds lamb
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons lard
6 small potatoes
6 small carrots
6 small onions
Salt and pepper
Dumplings

Have lamb breast or shoulder cut into small cubes. Dredge these in flour and brown in hot lard. Season, cover with water, and simmer for about an hour. Add vegetables and cook until they are done. About fifteen minutes before serving, drop dumplings on top of meat and vegetables, not in liquid, cover tightly, and cook without removing cover for fifteen minutes. To serve, place meat in center of platter with vegetables and dumplings around it. Serve immediately.

Dumplings.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons lard
¾ cup milk

Sift dry ingredients, cut in fat, and add enough milk to give a smooth dough. Drop by spoonfuls on top of meat and vegetables in stew. Cover tightly and steam for fifteen minutes.

Beef Stew to a Queen's Taste.

1½ pounds boneless beef stew
3 tablespoons lard
3 cups boiling water
6 carrots
6 stalks celery
6 small white onions
6 small round potatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
Pepper and paprika
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 head cauliflower

Have beef cut into 2-inch cubes. Brown in hot lard. Add boiling water, salt and pepper, and simmer about one and one-half hours. Forty-five minutes before serving, add the vegetables. Cut carrots in lengthwise pieces and the celery in 4-inch sticks. Add onions and potatoes whole. Boil whole cauliflower separately. When all are done, arrange on a hot platter. Place the cauliflower in the center, with the meat around it. Then arrange the vegetables in separate piles around edge of platter. Sprinkle the cauliflower with paprika, and meat with chopped parsley. Thicken gravy and serve separately.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A GREAT POINT-GETTER

One of the most valuable devices for getting points, when the right stage for it arrives, is the "forcing pass." This is in effect a "passing of the buck" to your partner, commanding him to make the decision for the side. Usually that decision must consist of his making another bid or doubling the opponents' last bid. If he cannot do one, he must do the other, but he must not let the bidding die without action on his part. This kind of situation can exist only when previous bidding has made it clear that you know your side can do one of those two things profitably, but you feel that your partner will be in a better position to make the choice than you can.

Both sides vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♠
3 ♦	PASS	Pass	?

East-West vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥
4 ♠	PASS	Pass	?

Neither side vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥
2 ♦	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	4 ♣	Dbl
4 ♦	PASS	Pass	?

North-South vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
Pass	2 ♣	2 ♥	3 ♣
3 ♥	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
5 ♥	PASS	Pass	?

In all of the bidding sequences given above, West is shown as making a "forcing pass," compelling East to decide the ultimate action of the side. The logic of each situation is definite. In the first case, it is clear that East and West can safely bid a game, as indicated by East's forcing take-out. Therefore, when West passes the interference bid of 3-Diamonds, he is telling his partner to decide whether the opponents may be set more points than a game is worth. He must not pass.

In the second case East has already reached a heart game. So, when South follows with his 4-Spade call, palpably a sacrifice, West's pass tells his partner that he does not feel sure of 5-Hearts and asks his partner to make the decision. If East thinks 5-Hearts can be made, he should bid it, otherwise double South. Of course, if he considers 5-Hearts safe, he will double. South anyway if a four-trick set seems sure.

In the third case, West passes to ask his partner whether 4-No-Trumps can be made; East must double if he thinks it cannot or if he thinks the doubled bid may be set for more points than game would be worth.

In the fourth case, West asks East to make a try for 5-No Trumps or 6-Clubs, or else double the 5-Hearts, whichever looks best to him.

HALIFAX TEEMS FROM DOUBLING OF POPULATION

Housing Shortage Acute Due To Expanding of War Activities.

HALIFAX, N. S.—(U.P.)—Mushroomed to twice its normal population by the influx of war-time residents, Halifax, Nova Scotia's capital city, is faced in extreme form with the problems of housing and feeding that beset many Canadian towns and cities today. This Canadian port, so far east it operates in the Atlantic Time Belt; so near the war zone it practices a modified blackout; is full to overflowing.

It is a case of standing room only.

Apart from the troubles of visitors, who telephone hopefully from one hotel to another in a vain search for rooms, local residents themselves have their housing worries.

Typical was the complaint of a Halifax business girl who wrote to a local editor protesting that men of the services were given preferences by landladies.

One reason, the girl suggested, was that housekeepers with marriageable daughters saw greater possibilities in a house full of young men than in a bevy of bachelor girls. Again, service men in need of a room were willing to pay almost any price, and double up with room mates as well, she said.

But what about us—business girls of Halifax—we work all day in stores and offices; we have a pleasant smile for everyone, yet at the end of the day we never know whether we are going to receive a notice from our landladies to vacate our rooms."

As one hope of relief to both residents and visitors came word that the Dominion government is considering the erection of between 300 and 400 dwellings in the city. Already a Federal representative has been looking over possible sites.

As with housing in this busy port, so it is with dining facilities. Restaurants are crowded, lunch counters jammed.

Gone are the days when a diner had a whole table to himself. He eats lunch with a young Newfoundlander, here to join the Air Force. For dinner his vis-a-vis is an army captain from Toronto. Or they may be a sailor lad from Winnipeg, a husky battle-dressed youngster from British Columbia or Alberta, a French matelot, a ship's second mate.

That is Halifax today—crowded, busy and war-conscious.

Residents with an extra room rent it out to a homeless visitor.

'JARDINE' MENACED

LOGAN, Utah—(U.P.)—"Juniper Jardine" has withstood 30 centuries of the worst abuse nature could offer, but the Forest Service has been forced to take action against two new enemies—souvenir seekers and initial carvers. "Juniper Jardine" is a massive juniper tree, named in honor of William J. Jardine, secretary of agriculture under President Herbert Hoover.

'Whirlpool' Bath Offers a Speedy Cure for Bruises

DURHAM, N. H.—(INS)—At a cost of only $15 a University of New Hampshire graduate student developed a "whirlpool" bath which cures in an afternoon a bad bruise or twist that ordinarily requires a week's treatment.

According to the inventor, George Fielding, graduate assistant in the physical education and athletic departments, the simple instrument works on an entirely different principle than other types of baths. He said it has proven more than satisfactory in many tests at the university and can be made for about a twentieth the cost of other "whirlpool" baths.

He developed the principle with the assistance of Paul Scott, director of athletics at Culver-Stockton, Canton, Miss., Fielding said. Three pipes are set in a bathtub a foot apart. Two face each other, while the third is set at right angles. Hot water, under extreme pressure, is forced through the pipes. The injured member is placed at the point where the three streams of hot meet.

An opportunity for a practical test of the bath came with a severe leg bruise suffered by a faculty member while skiing. Ordinary treatment had failed to stop the pain and swelling. A few hours after the bath treatment the bruise was gone and all pain had disappeared.

Equipment for storing frost-frosted foods in home basement lockers has been developed by the refrigeration industry.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself

SOMETIMES I think nothing ever happens to me. I might just as well not have a telephone, for all the Pot of Gold cares; an inquiring reporter has never pursued me on the street to ask what I think about trousers for women; I go to the movies all the time and I've never won a dish; the Harvard class of '41 never selected me as the best—or even worst — companion on a desert island. Oh, well, I've seen Charles Boyer. That's something . . .

Dorothy Kilgallen

I think Jimmy Stewart must get twice as much mail as any other boy in camp . . . I hope Buddy DeSylva does a good job with his forthcoming picture about Texas Guinan and doesn't make her a tawdry, slatternly night club hostess, a sort of Tugboat Annie on land.

She was something more than that—she was the spirit of her day, even as Mayor Jimmy Walker was.

I remember covering her funeral. She was laid out in state at Campbell's funeral parlors on Broadway, rouged and curled, and on her closed lids weer false eyelashes. That was Texas Guinan; only Tex would go to her grave in false eyelashes.

And speaking of film biographies, I hope no pretty boy is given the lead role in the picture about George Gershwin's life. George wasn't a pretty boy. Except, of course, with those sharps and flats . . .

I wonder if little Joan Carroll will be as big a hit in the movies when she returns to Hollywood as she was on Broadway. Her duet of "Let's Be Buddies," with Ethel Merman, was one of the great moments of this Broadway theatrical season.

If you have to envy commuters, this is the season in which to do it; their gardens are just coming up now, and nothing is prettier . . . I liked Bob Considine's crack about the Hess situation. When informed that the Nazi leader had parachuted down in Scotland, Bob whistled, "What a Bundle for Britain!"

I read somewhere that Eugene Pallette was thinking of retiring from the movies. I hope it's not true. I always fell for his rendition of the dumb, exasperated, heart-of-gold film detective . . .

I think Congress ought to accept Bill Corum's oft-repeated suggestion and stage a National Lottery as a means of raising some of the money we need for defense. Enough people like a small gamble to make it pay—painlessly . . .

I'd bet money that the Jean-Gabin-Marlene Dietrich story is a press agent's dream. Both are coming out soon in new pictures . . .

I think the Harvard press agent (heavens, that sound odd!) ought to get a raise after his recent stunt. That wonderful gag—having the Harvard students strip for Sally Rand! Real page one fodder . . .

I keep hearing wonderful things, via the grapevine, about a play called "Bed Rock," which was produced recently by the Amherst College Masquers. Understand some Broadway producers are giving it the eagle eye.

When you eliminate roses, orchids, gardenias, lilies and violets, I don't know one flower from another. I mean arbutus from freesia, for instance . . .

I imagine Stephen Foster would have felt glad to die in poverty, as he did, so long as he was spared the knowledge of what was to happen in 1940-41 to that slightly brunette Jeanie of his . . . Never saw such card tricks as those done by the fabulous Dr. Sydney Ross at the Rainbow Room.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

Score a point for Crawford on this one, which is especially recommended to the wits of Harvard who nominated her for pensioning. The one-time hotcha dancing daughter of Hollywood delivers convincingly in a role that would have frightened many a movie glamour gal.

She is the leader of a blackmail gang—a woman whose outlook on life is embittered by the hideous scar, result of a burn in childhood, which disfigures her face. Harder than nails, and vengeful, she still hungers for love. The first man who looks upon her affliction without flinching is the suave rascal Torsten Barring (Veidt). His reward is her blind adoration and willingness to do his bidding — even to the point of murder.

But in course of a "job" she meets a famous plastic surgeon (Douglas) who restores her beauty. The question now: Can the operation also restore her soul, or has he created a Frankenstein monster, the more dangerous for her innocent, normal appearance? It is answered, credibly, in this solidly built melodrama. Personally I'm a little weary of the courtroom flashback method of narration, but here it's most effective and serves to heighten suspense.

"The People vs. Dr. Kildare." Screenplay by Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin from story by Lawrence P. Bachmann and Max Brand. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. Principals: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laroine Day, Bonita Grenville, Alma Kruger, Red Skelton, Paul Stanton, Diana Lewis.

Familiar and dreaded in the medical world is the patient who blames all his troubles on the doctor who treated him — and sometimes sues.

Young Kildare (still not married to Nurse Lamont) is in that scrape here. Happening upon a roadside auto crash, he operates to save the life of a young ice-skater (Granville.) When she recovers, paralyzed, she blames the operation for her helpless leg, and sues.

Plot-wise, this chapter in the Kildare progress, is very thin gruel. Where it's rich is in its crusty dialogue (notably from Barrymore) and its frequent resort to irrelevant comedy interludes (by Skelton and Eddie Acuff) to gloss over the story's weaknesses.

Chatter Corner

(Just jottings about people you know, as they're seen here and there about town.)

Ruth Durig, deputy city auditor, deciphering a letter for one of her friends. . . . Ray Hines, storm water drainage inspector, making a date with the dentist. . . . Police members looking forward to their civil service examinations next Friday. . . . Municipal Court Clerk Ralph Hughes whistling lustilly as he sharpened a pencil.

William Thull explaining that he didn't catch any fish yesterday because the streams were too muddy. . . . County Superintendent Boyd Robinson trying to figure out how he can attend two or three high school commencements the same night.

* * *

Friends of Margaret Wadsworth learning of her nomination to Scholaris, freshman scholastic honorary at Ohio State university. . . . Mrs. Winona Darling threatening to "lose my good disposition" because of the sudden flood of telephone calls on the switchboard at General hospital. . . . The Senior high school band practicing on the bleachers at the football field.

* * *

J. A. Geiger sweeping the front walk assisted by his granddaughter. . . . Mrs. Jean Lodrick advising that the best treatment for pinched fingers is to "keep them out of places they don't belong." . . . Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud asserting that the new addition to General hospital would be "completed soon."

* * *

W. W. Mickey complaining that he had to get up too early. . . . Harry Mehock, athletic director at Senior high, supervising lining of the athletic field with lime.

MEETING SET

Home Lighting To Be Subject Discussed At Bellville.

An Ohio State university extension service meeting on lighting the home will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Bellville high school auditorium, according to Miss Elizabeth Bay, county home demonstration agent.

Speaker at the session will be Miss Anne Biebricher, lighting specialist at Ohio State, who will conduct demonstrations of the various kinds of electric fixtures and their use in the home. The meeting was arranged especially for women whose homes are lighted by Rural Electrification lines, but it will be open to the public, Miss Bay said.

REVOLT BREWS IN CONGRESS ON LOAN BILL

Comments By President Bring Farm Group Threat To Override Veto.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt faced a congressional farm revolt today if he decides to veto the price-pegging loan bill intended to put millions of dollars in the pockets of cotton, corn, and wheat growers.

"We'll override his veto if he does," said Senator Ellender (D.-La.), usually an administration supporter. "I can't believe he would not stay by his campaign promises of parity for farmers."

Other farm-minded legislators were less outspoken but agreed that congress would overturn a veto. They cited top-heavy majorities congress had registered in passing the bill, which provides for mandatory loans at 85 per cent parity on the major crops.

(Parity prices are designed to give farmers the same return for their crops in terms of other commodities as they received in the base years 1909-14.)

Even if the parity loan bill should fail, congressional leaders said they have an ace in hole. This is the $450,000,000 for additional farm benefit payments already voted by the senate, which boosted the amount from the $212,000,000 appropriated by the house. The bill is now in conference.

"We're going to do something for the farmers this time, either through government loans or benefit payments," one senator said.

President Roosevelt roused the powerful bipartisan farm group over the week-end by his comments of the price-pegging loan legislation. He told his press conference Friday that in considering this measure he must weigh the benefit payments already being paid, or prices to farmers might go above parity.

"Nobody is asking above parity for farmers," Ellender told reporters. "All we are asking is a chance for parity. Everything that the farmer buys is jumping in cost. He has not shared in the defense program."

PROGRAM SET

Class Day Exercises To Be Held at Ontario Tuesday.

Class day at Springfield township high school will be held in the school auditorium Tuesday according to L. C. Stingel, superintendent.

Music for the morning program will be furnished by the school orchestra directed by Gladys Arnholt, music instructor. Mary Snyder will give the salutatory address.

Walter Bogantz will give the class will and Richard Cassel will give the class history. A piano solo will be played by Evelyn Taylor.

Presentation and acceptance of the class key will be made by Lawrence Clever and William Gerberick respectively. School awards will be presented by Superintendent Stingel.

The valedictory address will be given by Eileen Handley.

QUIZ SUSPECT IN 5 SLAYINGS

Authorities Hold Man After Discovery of Bodies on Indiana Farm.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind.—(AP)—Authorities questioned a 26-year-old suspect in Dearborn county jail today to see if they had the relentless killer who stalked five members of a family over a bottomland farm and shot them down one by one.

Deputy Sheriff Arch Voit predicted a break in the case by noon. Voit and Sheriff William A. Winegard had talked with the young man from time to time since he was taken into custody yesterday.

The slain were found Saturday scattered over a quarter mile of the Laughery creek bottoms 14 miles southwest of Lawrenceburg. The sheriff said they had died the night before.

Johnston Argue, 60, was in the kitchen; their granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth Breeden, 12, in the barn, and their sons, Leo, 24, and William, 30 outdoors, their corpses soaked with overnight rain.

A .12-gauge shotgun was missing from the farmhouse. Upstairs, a trunk in which more than $100 was reported to have been kept had been broken open with an ax which lay near it. There was no money in it.

The massacre was discovered Saturday morning when a neighbor, Harvey Sellers and his son, William, went to see two horses hitched to a corn planter stood overnight in a field.

Winegard said the killer evidently got Mrs. Argue first, shot the granddaughter as she fled from the house, killed the sons as they planted corn and ambushed the old man.

SEVEN WHO COULDN'T SWIM GO DOWN WITH BOAT AFTER BLAST

LITTLE RIVER, S. C.—(U.P.)—A coroner's jury established today that seven of the 38 men, women and children aboard the pleasure boat Nightingale when it exploded off the coast yesterday, couldn't swim and decided to take their chances aboard the ship. They were lost; the 31 others survive.

The Nightingale, 61 feet long, propelled by two gasoline motors, was chartered by a bottling company giving an outing to its employes. It anchored seven miles off the coast so the holidayers could fish. The motors wouldn't start. The crew was tinkering with the carburetor of one. There was an explosion, followed at once by a second one of even greater force as the gasoline tank containing 120 gallons went up.

The fishing boat Cadet was maneuvering in to take the Nightingale in tow and the Edward was in sight. Apparently the seven thought one or the other would take them off. The sea was too rough, however, but the 31 others were picked up from life rings and bits of wreckage to which they had been clinging.

The survivors included Captain Douglas Sabiston and Don Mintz, his engineer. These men were the crew.

The dead were E. R. Griffin and George R. Barfield, Jr., Rocky Mount, N. C., and T. W. Cotharan, Shelton Lefler, G. A. Barber and Barber's sons, Guy, Jr., 20, and Jerry, 18, all of Salisbury, N. C.

DIES AT MIFFLIN

Samuel Whitcomb Succumbs After Long Illness.

A life-long resident of Mifflin and vicinity, Samuel H. Whitcomb, 79, died at his home in Mifflin this morning following a lingering illness. He was born in Mifflin, March 4, 1861.

He is survived by two sons, Joseph and Samuel, of Mifflin; two daughters, Mrs. Gregg Bracken, of Mifflin, and Mrs. Ray Brindle of Mansfield; 11 grandchildren and ten great grandchildren. Also surviving is a sister, Mrs. Pearl Young, of Mansfield.

The body was taken to the Wappner funeral home where it will remain preceding the time of services at the United Brethren church in Mifflin, Wednesday at 3 p. m. Rev. C. B. A. Stacy will officiate. Burial will be in Zehner cemetery.

DEATH CLAIMS LENA LONG, 52

Bellville Woman Succumbs at Home of Sister In Mt. Gilead.

BELLVILLE—Miss Lena Long, 52, died early today at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. F. Baker, Mt. Gilead, following a short illness.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. Baker, with whom she made her home, Mrs. Freda Keeler, Hastings, Mich., Mrs. Iva Poland, Mt. Gilead, and Mrs. Sarah Streby, Bellville; three brothers, Austin and Shannon Long, both of Bellville, Calvin Long, Butler; and a half-brother, Ora, Bellville.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the Shafer funeral home. Rev. E. G. Hamilton, pastor of the Church of Christ, will officiate. Burial will be in Bellville cemetery.

A letter addressed to a Chinese priest and mailed more than six months ago by Virgil D. Hess of Lexington had been returned to Hess today with Chinese figures stamped all over it and a little booklet of notes attached. There was enough English on the envelope, however, to tell Hess that the priest was "unclaimed and unknown" although an advertisement had been posted for him. The letter was addressed to Tientsin, China, but it apparently had been forwarded to other cities in the search for the addressee. The little booklet pasted on the envelope contained Chinese figures which Hess could not de-cipher.

A mushroom almost big enough to make a meal was found over the week-end by Filbert Hammett, 152 Park avenue, employe of the state highway roadside department. The monster mushroom, weighing three-fourths of a pound, was more than 10 inches tall and eight inches around. Hammett found it southeast of Lucas.

Mansfield police are beginning to wonder if some motorist is conducting a "one-man" campaign against the city's parking meters. Three have been knocked from their bases within the past two weeks. Meter No. 61 on North Walnut street was the latest to fall before the bumper of some auto. Others were damaged on Walnut and South Main streets.

Margery Campbell, art instructor at Mansfield Senior high school, who is sponsoring an "Everyman's Art Exhibit" at the school for faculty and pupils had to postpone the official opening of the show because master keys she had to get into the school Sunday weren't the masters they were supposed to be. The keys refused to unlock the doors to her classroom in which the exhibit was stored and as a result there was no show in the school corridors as scheduled this morning. The exhibit will be put in place today, however.

Mrs. McBride is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Matilda McCaskey of Shelby and Mrs. Albert Lash of Tiro.

Funeral services will be conducted at the late home at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be in Greenlawn cemetery, Plymouth.

AGREEMENT TO END HARD COAL TIE-UP WEIGHED

Negotiations Continue in Try To Avert New Stoppage In Bituminous Mines.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(AP)—A short-lived work stoppage in the anthracite coal industry ended today when the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) and Pennsylvania hard coal operators tentatively agreed on a new wage contract granting wage increases to approximiately 100,000 hard coal miners.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—A tentative agreement to end a work stoppage in the hard coal fields goes before a full conference of operators and United Mine workers delegates today and negotiations to avert another stoppage in the soft coal industry continue.

The anthracite stoppage became effective today, although John L. Lewis, UMW president, said the union had issued no formal call for a strike. He said the industry was not operating because of its policy of suspending work when no agreement exists.

The anthracite agreement expired May 1, but had been continued until May 15 under two extensions.

The tentative agreement to return 91,000 hard coal miners to work was forecast by Maj. W. W. Inglis, representative of the operators, who said, after a conference yesterday with the miners:

"A tentative agreement is under consideration, upon which both sides will consult their associates. The conferees feel confident that an agreement will be consummated at a joint meeting of operators and miners which will convene at 11 a. m."

The chief issue in the contract negotiations is the UMW demand for $1 a day increase for day workers and a 20 per cent increase for contract labor. Other demands include paid vacations and readjustment of working conditions.

Threat of further work stoppage in the bituminous coal industry appeared definitely eased. A truce had been arranged as the result of the intervention of Vice-Chairman William H. Davis of the national defense mediation board on Saturday.

Chief issue in soft coal negotiations is the union demand for elimination of a 40-cent differential in daily wages between southern and northern miners. The union also asks abolition of the so-called "reject clause" under which miners are penalized when they mine inferior coal.

Northern operators' representatives meet UMW representatives at 11 a. m. today and representatives of southern mine owners confer with miners' spokesmen at 2:30 p. m.

The full-scale committee of northern soft coal operators meets tomorrow with the union's full-scale committee. Main point of discussion will be whether operations shall be continued in the north, pending further negotiations with southern operators, or suspended until an agreement is reached in the south.

Plane Reported Over-Due, 9-State Alarm Broadcast

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A nine-state alarm was broadcast today by the Civil Aeronautics authority for a long-overdue plane carrying two Cleveland businessmen home from Washington.

The Warner-Fairchild four-seater monoplane was owned and piloted by Daniel Stone, head of an insurance agency. The passenger was Earl H. Waltz, a business associate.

Several private planes were pressed into the search, most of them fanning out over the Appalachian range in Pennsylvania. All pilots on commercial lines east and southeast of Cleveland were asked to be on the lookout for the missing craft.

Stone took off from Washington airport Saturday morning. Reports as to his route conflicted, some sources declaring he planned to fly directly here and others reporting the two men intended to stop in Philadelphia.

The missing ship is blue and yellow and carries the license NO-16869.

Undefeated Braves Chalk Third Straight Victory

Sport Podge by REX HESS

It was an impressive ceremony the American Legion staged at the Fairground diamond yesterday afternoon preceding the Ohio State league ball game between Mansfield's Braves and the Fostoria Red Birds.

In observance of "I Am An American Day," set aside by presidential proclamation in honor of naturalized citizens of the United States, the Legion presented a flag to the ball club and assisted in raising it on the centerfield flag pole.

The Legion color guard, drum and bugle corps marched to the flag pole, followed by the ball players of both clubs, who didn't march, as only ball players can't.

Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of First Lutheran church and chaplain of the Mansfield American Legion post, gave a short, but inspired talk on the value of American citizenship, the right of free worship and free speech, and the privilege of throwing baseballs instead of bombs.

"The only strike-out I really want to see," declared Chaplain Swoyer, "is that Hitler be stricken out forever."

Rev. Swoyer also offered prayer upon the presentation of the flag, which is probably the first time a Sunday ball game at the Fairground ever opened with prayer. The Braves had been doing well enough without it, but the prayer very likely didn't do them any harm.

* * *

Dagwood Bumstead might not approve of the procedure, but they tell me the way young Al Hager spanks that baby down the fairway and nurses it up to the cup is a caution.

Hager has been guilty of as steady and consistant a brand of near-par golf as has been seen on the fairways of this vicinity since Baby Dumpling was as young as his baby sister.

Right on the old par-nose, or one or two strokes under or over he's been through all those nine straight matches chalked up by Mansfield High's district niblick champions. Nothing sensational, you understand, just right in there all the time.

It's a long time now since Hager's hammerin' of that little white pellet has been news. So consistent he's been.

The only time he makes news any more is when he goes four or five strokes over par as he did Saturday at Bucyrus. And then the news included the mere fact that he had won the district high school championship.

I wouldn't say he's going to win the state title this weekend. I wouldn't put the jinx on him that way. But the kid is good, you'll admit. Mighty good for a junior in high school.

* * *

Mansfield's Braves continue to set something of a strikeout record by their hurling staff.

Fred Wolpert and Chuck Byers yesterday fanned a total of 15 Red Birds to add to the 29 Lima whiffing bees of the first two games.

Forty-four strikeouts in 27 innings! Mister, that's whiffing 'em!

SHELBY SETTLEMENT EDGES WASHINGTON

Shelby Settlement baseballers edged Washington's Sohioans, 5 to 4, in an 11-inning clash at the Settlement yesterday.

The Sohioans had a 4 to 0 lead in the fifth inning, but in the eighth, Shelby Settlement tied the score with a four run rally. The pitcher's battle continued till the eleventh when the Settlement scored the winning run.

C. Biglin, pitching for the Settlement, was credited with 19 strikeouts and L. Sampsel fanned 12 for the Sohioans.

Indian Streak Snapped

Milnar Elected To Again Set Tribe Going Right.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians' winning streak was snapped at five by the Athletics yesterday in a 10 to 3 decision, but the Redskins are more concerned over what is ahead.

The club's last victory stretch, ended at 11, was followed by four consecutive defeats. Al Milnar finally beat St. Louis to put the Indians back in winning ways.

With this in mind Manager Roger Peckinpaugh passed up Mel Harder's mound turn today and nominated the big southpaw to set things right again. Opposing Milnar, who is after his sixth triumph, was Rookie Lester McCrabb.

Philadelphia showed little respect for the league-leaders in blasting Cal Dorsett, Joe Heving and Ken Jungels for 16 hits and 10 runs.

The Indians could pick up only six hits, including a home run by Jeff Heath, off Johnny Babich and Tom Ferrick. Heath's circuit smash scored Hal Trosky, who had walked, in the second inning and the Redskins added a run in the fifth on a walk, Clarence Campbell's single and a wild pitch.

Dorsett was touched for six hits and four runs before retiring with no one out in the second inning. Heving gave up six hits in five innings and Jungels four in two.

Roy Weatherly made his first appearance since injuring his shoulder on the recent St. Louis trip and flied out in batting for Rollie Hemsley.

The setback cut Cleveland's lead over Chicago to four games. Harder is expected to pitch the series finale tomorrow with Bob Feller and Jim Bagby or Al Smith hurling the two Washington games that wind up the eastern trip.

Leo Durocher and his Brooklyn Dodgers are discovering this isn't going to be the kind of National league race where you can take anything for granted.

The Brooks, who never do things in less than bunches, looked fine while reeling off that winning streak of seven straight which hoisted them into first place. Then came an 11-inning defeat in Pittsburgh, and Durocher decided it was a good time to break up his combination.

* * *

In Chicago yesterday he stuck Pete Reiser back in the lineup in place of Jimmy Wasdell, who'd been leading the club with a .370 average; benched Dixie Walker in favor of right-handed hitting Joe Vosmik, and—the Dodgers blew a 7-4 decision to the Cubs. With the St. Louis Cardinals meanwhile shading the Phillies, 6-5, that left Brooklyn only a game in front of the Redbirds.

The Cards had to pay a goodly price for the triumph though, for Catcher Walker Cooper was shelved for probably six weeks when he dislocated his shoulder in a collision at the plate.

Back in third place the New York Giants ran their winning streak to four straight by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-4, the Terrymen getting three in the seventh to win after the Bucs had made the most of six bases on balls to get all their runs in the first two frames.

Meanwhile Paul Derringer, getting his third win of the year, hauled the Cincinnati Reds out of their longest losing streak in more than 300 games. Two handy singles by Rookie Chuck Aleno dovetailed with Derringer's seven-hit, nine-strikeout pitching for a 4-3 defeat of the Boston Braves after six losses

The second-place Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees got 16 safeties apiece. The Sox, headed by Taft Wright, got four runs in the first and five in the last three innngs to rout the Washington Senators, 10-5. All of the Yankees hit safely, Joe Gordon louting a three-run homer, to back up Lefty Gomez' six-hit pitching for a 12-2 thumping of the St. Louis Browns. Even Gomez got two hits.

* * *

The Detroit Tigers, who seem to be recovering from Hank Greenberg's departure, won their fourth in a row, though they had to go 11 innings to do it. Two unearned runs were the margin of a 6-5 triumph over the Boston Red Sox, who got one back when Jimmy Foxx clouted a homer in the last of the 11th but couldn't get to Relief Pitcher Al Benton for any more.

Knapp Hurls One-Hit Game

Providents Beat North Ridgeville at Elyria.

Frances Clark Knapp, the springtime bride, got through a ball game without injury last night at Elyria, and Mansfield's state champion Provident Loan girls' softball club got back on the winning path with a 2-0 victory over North Ridgeville

Giving up only one hit and one base on balls, Fran got brilliant support from her teammates and was master, or mistress, of the situation throughout the seven-inning tilt. Those two were the only Ridgeville runners left on base.

* * *

D. Pitts hurled brilliant ball for the losers, fanning 16 of the Providents, but she walked seven, and she didn't have it in that sixth inning clutch when the Mansfielders pushed over two runs.

Jean Herrick led off with a single and Bucky Holda walked. Donna Schuster's long single over third brought both runners home.

The Providents go to Cuyahoga Falls next Sunday, and play their next home game at Johns Park May 30, meeting Wilk's Meats of Columbus. On June 1 at Johns Park they play the J. & K. Shoes of Columbus.

Angott Favored Over Mancini

CLEVELAND—(AP)—A scrappy Youngstown lad with a machine-gun punch climbs into the ring with the world champion tonight, bringing to life a dream of two years ago.

It was then that Lenny (Boom Boom) Mancini hitch-hiked to New York City with championship thoughts. The rest of the country didn't hear about him until he battered his way from preliminary boy to main eventer.

The word got around that the 22-year-old Ohioan could sock, and one of the results was signing of the 10-round scrap here with Sammy Angott of Louisville, Ky., the national boxing association ruler of the lightweights.

Angott is heavily favored in the non-title affair by most everyone but Lenny.

Six-round preliminaries pair bantamweights Freddie Pope of Columbus and Billy Day of Chicago and welterweights Beauford Glover of Mansfield and Sammy Secreet of Pittsburgh. Max Schindler of Lorain and Billy Miller of Alliance, lightweights, clash in a five.

ONTARIO DEFEATS MOON BILLIARDS

M'CALLISTER SCOUTS FOSTORIA BIRDS

Jack McCallister, manager of the Cleveland Indians in 1927, and now a scout for the Boston Braves, was in the Fairground stands yesterday as the Mansfield Braves and Fostoria Red Birds battled in an Ohio State league game.

"But," said Joe Donnelly, league president who accompanied McCallister, "he wasn't looking over the Braves. He knows better than to scout Cleveland Indian prospects."

Catcher Nehring appeared the brightest prospect in the Fostoria lineup, while rookie hurler Cassell also looked worthy of the once-over.

Risks Chance At Title

Conn Meets Buddy Knox Who Isn't Soft Touch.

By JACK MAHON.

NEW YORK —(INS)— Handsome Billy Conn, the million dollar baby in Uncle Mike Jacobs' nursery of heavyweight hopefuls, will risk his long-awaited chance to meet Champion Joe Louis in June when he meets third-rater Buddy Knox in a ten-rounder in Pittsburgh next Monday night.

Uncle Michael, who thinks Conn is the only apple in the orchard, let this feline out of the burlap today when he told us: "If Conn hurts himself or is involved in another bad fight against Knox, he blows the June fight with Louis and I'll substitute Abe Simon. He's taking an awful big risk."

This somewhat blunt analysis of the situation came as something of a shock for Jacobs has treated Conn like an adopted son ever since the good-looking Irish guy shot into prominence a few years ago. So much so that many of the sidewalk senators in the Cabanas along Jacobs' beach have been rude enough to intimate the heavyweight title would be "traded" to Handsome William.

"I've warned Conn and his Manager Johnny Ray," said Mike. "I didn't want them to fight from March till June but Ray insisted. He said he wanted to take Nathan Mann. He wound up with Gunnar Barlund in Chicago and you know what happened." (Ed. Note: Barlund quit in the eighth round and a boxing commission investigation resulted.)

"No," answered the promoter. "After what happened in the Barlund fight I decided to let them run things the way they wanted. If that's the way Ray wants to manage Conn he and Billy can take their chances. I don't have to put Conn in now. I can use Simon if necessary."

Well, why in blazes were Ray and Conn taking the risk of Billy hurting himself or getting into another jam so close to the Louis match. They've awaited for more than a year? Was it for money or because they felt another kayo by Billy would aid the ballyhoo for the Louis fight?"

* * *

"The Louis fight doesn't need that kind of ballyhoo," snapped Jacobs. "You should see the orders I have in here for it already. They must want to pick up a few bucks. I think Conn is taking a big risk but that's his business."

Edge Fostoria 5-3 Before 700 Crowd

Byers' Stellar Relief Hurling Gains His Second Win of Season.

MANSFIELD'S hustling Braves chalked up their third straight victory of the young Ohio State league season yesterday afternoon, edging the Fostoria Red Birds 5 to 3 before a crowd of 702 paying customers, plus uniformed American Legionnaires who conducted "I Am An American" day ceremonies before the game.

Not so artistic as their two wins over Lima, but just as satisfactory was the verdict the Braves gained to remain undefeated in league play.

Fred Wolpert, tall right hand hurler from the Cleveland Rosenblums, appeared a bit shaky in his first mound assignment, walking five, fanning five and allowing four hits and two runs in his four-frame tenure on the hill.

But it was a twisted ankle that caught up with him in the fourth as he was running bases that forced him from the tilt, and left the way for Chuck Byers to turn in his second pitching victory of the season.

* * *

Chuck twirled the last five frames for the Braves, giving up three hits and one run, walking two, hitting one batter, and fanning 10 of the enemy. The Red Birds were just dead pigeons before the Byers hook.

Braves At Home.
Tuesday—Findlay.
Thursday—Tiffin.
Sunday—Lima.

The Braves lost the services of Catcher Tim Mangan for at least a week when a foul ball from Dragovich's bat in the seventh tore the skin from his finger nail on the middle finger of his throwing hand.

Fans got their first look at young Eddie Mutryn, heavy hitting receiver from the Cleveland Bartuneks in the remaining inning, but Eddie Also got banked up by a foul ball on his throwing hand and didn't look his best behind the plate. However he punched out a clean single to center in his one time at bat.

The game started out as a mound duel between Wolpert and Cassell, young Red Bird rookie, but Mansfield broke the ice in the third when TeStruth led off with a walk and Wolpert laid down a sacrifice bunt. Bob Ankrum banged a double off the left field wall, scoring TeStruth, and then Ankrum raced home with the second run as Dick Morse rapped a double to the scoreboard.

Fostoria tied it up in the fourth. Ellison drew a walk and scored on Streng's double to deep center, but Streng was out at third trying to tally on the play at the plate. Ankrum's relay of McGrath's throw over Mangan's head, but Wolpert, backing up the play, caught the ball in the air and wheeled it to Morse at third.

Nehring then walked and was forced at second by Cassell who tallied on Amidei's double to center. Once again the hitter was out at third trying to stretch it, the play being Moore to Ankrum to Morse.

* * *

The Braves took the lead again in their half of the fourth with two runs. With one down, McGrath and Salem singled. McGrath was out at the plate on TeStruth's tap down the third base line. Wolpert got a life on Streng's error, filling the bases, and Salem and TeStruth counted on Ankrum's single. Wolpert, trying to reach third, was out, Dragovich to Streng.

* * *

Fostoria picked up a run in the seventh. Amidei rolled to Siegbert, but was safe when Byers dropped Seigbert's toss at first. The next two batters were easy outs, but Dragovich blasted a long double to left, scoring Amidei.

Mansfield got that one back in the eighth on Moore's single, a wild pitch, and Salem's double.

Tonight the Braves go to Fostoria in quest of their fourth win, with Tony Drewek scheduled to make his first appearance on the hill. Tomorrow night they come back to the Fairground to meet Findlay. Pat Patterson likely will be the hurler for that one.

Blues Capture Association Lead

(By Associated Press)

Little Billy Myer, fiery Kansas City pilot seeking his third straight American Association pennant, has nominated George Wensloff to go against the slugging Kels of Minneapolis tonight for first place at stake.

Kansas City recaptured the league lead from Minneapolis yesterday by defeating St. Paul twice, 5 to 3 and 4 to 1, as the Millers split a twin bill with Milwaukee.

Columbus jumped into third place by sweeping a twin bill with Indianapolis, 7 to 4 and 5 to 4.

Toledo and Louisville split a double header, the hens taking the first, 2 to 1, and losing the second, 9 to 0.

SHOOT BOOKED

American Legion Boy Scout troop and Y. M. C. A. boys team will stage their first rifle shoot of the season tonight at 7 o'clock at the armory.

Crash In Which Mansfielder Was Killed

Samuel Contra, 20, Mansfield, passenger in the car shown in the top photo, was killed instantly Saturday night and two other youths were hurt, one seriously, when the car crashed into the side of the truck, shown in the lower picture, at the junction of routes 13 and 224 near Greenwich. The automobile was driven by Joseph Marfia, 17, Mansfield, Contra's nephew. Contra was thrown out of the car beneath the loaded truck which toppled over on him, state highway patrolmen said. The truck broke off a power line pole and homes and filling stations in the vicinity were in darkness most of the night. James Kennedy, 18, Mansfield, another passenger, in the car, was seriously injured.

THEATERS

Beauty and Melody.

Abounding in beauty, melody and drama, "Ziegfeld Girl" continues at the Ohio. Telling the story of three glamorous beauties, Judy Garland, Hedy LaMarr and Lana Turner who reached the pinnacle of success in Ziegfeld productions the picture has Tony Martin, Jackie Cooper and Edward Everett Horton in its star-studded cast. Judy Garland revives the hit "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows" in one of the production numbers and the eye-fillers include a Ziegfeldian staircase scene featuring "You Stepped Out of a Dream."

Sadie Hawkins Race.

The Sadie Hawkins day race of All Capp's comic strip, "Li'l Abner" is featured in the picture based on the happenings among these cartoon characters showing at the Park. Granville Owen, ex-college athlete and former amateur heavyweight boxer, has the role of "Li'l Abner," and the supporting cast has some of the old-time slapstick comedians, Buster Keaton, Chester Conklin and Edgar Kennedy. Peter Lorre is up to his sinister tricks again in "Mr. District Attorney," the second picture.

Train Has Part.

One of the most famous old trains in the nation was fired up to run 75 miles an hour in Loretta Young's "The Lady From Cheyenne," showing at the Madison. Owned by the Union Pacific it is now more than 70 years old and is used only in motion picture work. It brings Miss Young and a band of settlers from the east to Wyoming and later it takes the star to Cheyenne on an important mission. Comedy and drama are combined in this production that has Edward Arnold, Robert Preston and Gladys George. "Her First Beau," the co-attraction, has Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper.

Criminal Pays.

A pardoned criminal who must repay his gangster boss for winning freedom for him is the central character in "High Sierra," Humphrey Bogart's starring vehicle at the Ritz. His final job takes him to a hide-out in the Sierras where he meets a girl who has also seen the seamy side of life. Ida Lupino plays the girl in this story of Roy Earl termed by the authors as "the last of the Dillinger gang." James Cagney and Pat O'Brien carry on a hilarious feud in the nautical comedy, "Here Comes the Navy," the co-attraction.

'Miss Mansfield' To Be Chosen At Theater Tuesday

"Miss Mansfield" will be chosen Tuesday night in a "Search for Talent contest," to be staged at the Park theater at 9 p. m. by Mrs. Agnes Winslow of the United Cinema Productions.

Young women between the ages of 14 and 25 will be rehearsed for the contest this afternoon by Mrs. Winslow, who announces that all contestants will wear evening dress.

The winner will be given the opportunity of entering a state contest in Columbus with expenses paid and her screen test, taken during the state competition, will be shown at the local theater.

An amateur talent contest held in conjunction with the "Miss Mansfield" contest will feature Smart's Serenaders, an organization employing 20 accordions and two marimbas.

Avis Laverne Forest, child singer of Galion, Patricia Dropsey, George Knackstedt, Rose Detrano, Billy Miller, Ralph Whip and Jack Dickson in singing and dancing specialties will also appear on the program.

FEW STOCKS GET MILD SUPPORT ON MARKET TODAY

But Many Leaders Remain Inert In Attempted Advance; Steel Trend Watched.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — A few coppers, steels, oils and rails made motions toward an advance in today's stock market but many leaders remained inert.

Attracting mild support in early dealings were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chespeake & Ohio and American Telephone.

Word that settlement of both hard and soft coal union controversies might be near was helpful to sentiment, brokers said, but the war outlook still was too cloudy for the comfort of most speculative contingents. The result was that commitments either way were kept at a minimum.

Market diagnosticians studied theh survey of the magazine "Steel" for industrial trend symptoms.

"Approximately 30 to 40 per cent of steel now being shipped is for purposes essential to defense," the review commented. "Nearly half of this is for direct defense and is covered by preference ratings. The other half is for railroads, merchant ships and many other items necessary to implement defense."

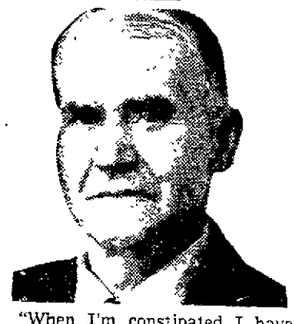
NEEDS NO SODA AFTER EATING



"When I'm constipated I have awful symptoms like I am bloated up tight with gas and have sharp gas cramps in my stomach, acid risings, like a lump is choking me, then I run for a dose of soda for relief. That was before I found Vendol, because when I take this grand medicine it gives such a thorough, easy bowel cleansing that with this temporary relief from constipation all symptoms of acid indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bloating, headache, acid risings, and lump in my throat disappear and I have thrown away my box of soda," says Mr. Fred Caris, who is a resident of Galion, Ohio.

When you take Vendol you take a real medicine. It is "what is in the bottle" that counts, and that explains why thousands of bottles have been sold around here, and people learn to rely upon Vendol when in need of a truly good medicine like it. Don't delay giving Vendol a trial if you need a medicine for the troubles described above due to constipation, need of a mild diuretic to your kidneys, or a carminative for your stomach. All leading druggists sell Vendol. Recommended here by Central Drug Store, corner Main and Fourth Streets.

THRONGS JOIN IN OBSERVANCE

Mark 'I Am An American' Day With Patriotic Events Over Nation.

nificance of our American system, and if we recognize the existence of Almighty leadership, then, when the clouds of war and destruction are swept from the skies and peace returns to the world, this land will be able to lead the other nations into a nobler and finer way of life and living more nearly our American way."

In Columbus, 4,000 attended a massing of the 48 state flags in the Ohio State university football stadium in a ceremony opening the national congress of the Sons of the American Revolution. The university's 90-piece band and 300-voice chorus presented a concert.

Ten thousand viewed a patriotic parade at Armco field in Middletown with several hundred naturalized citizens in places of honor.

Observance Here Held at Ball Game

Mansfield observed "I Am An American" Day in ceremonies conducted by the American Legion before yesterday's baseball game at the Fairground between the Braves and Fostoria Red Birds.

Each person in the crowd of nearly 1,000 was presented with a small American flag as he entered the ball park, and McVey post, American Legion, presented the ball club with a flag and officiated at the flag raising in center field.

The presentation was made by Commander Earl Saltzgaber of the Legion, and a short talk was given by the post chaplain, Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of First Lutheran church, on the value of American citizenship.

Rev. Swoyer welcomed recently naturalized citizens to full rights as Americans, and urged native citizens not to give up those rights of free speech, freedom to worship, and democratic government. He also presented the invocation upon presentation of the flag.

The Legion color guard, drum and bugle corps, took an important part in the program which lasted 30 minutes.

RUMOR U. S. SET FOR IMPORTANT NEW AID MOVE

Washington Believes President on Verge of Making Big Decision.

it rearms, because "free labor has always defeated slave labor."

The president was believed to have hinted at some grave decision in the near future, when he declared, in connection with national foreign trade week, that:

"It is idle for us to talk of future foreign trade unless we are ready, now, to defend the principles upon which it is and must be based."

Capitol talk heavily emphasizes the word "now" in his statement.

General opinion in Washington is that the president is proceeding cautiously, naturally because of the grave consequences that accompany current international decisions but also because public opinion throughout the nation—as revealed in polls—is still opposed to war.

But belief will not down that some event of world-wide importance is about to break.

Hull Says Delivery To Be Guaranteed

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of State Hull, defining America's position in the world today as one of mortal danger, told the country "we will find a way" to guarantee delivery of adequate supplies to Great Britain.

He repeated his belief that Britain's successful defense was vital to this nation's security and in a radio address last night he put forward the five peace points which the administration feels should guide any post-war settlement.

Hull spoke of no peace now, however.

"First," he emphasized, "the tide of force must be turned back."

In contrast to this attitude, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) renewed his suggestions that the time was ripe for President Roosevelt to take the initiative for a negotiated peace in Europe's war.

"It would seem to me that the president at this time could well afford to seek a peace which would save England, her empire and the British fleet and would stop the slaughter of human beings," he said.

Hull took a different approach on the question of eventual peace, contending that until a system of open trade is firmly established, "there will never be peace in any real sense of the term." The occasion for his address over an NBC network was the observance of Foreign Trade week.
